

LEGISLATORS TO OBEY PRIMARY ON THE SENATORSHIP

Post-Dispatch Canvass of Members Reveals 2 Democrats Noncommittal.

65 STATE POSITIONS

Republicans United and Outspoken in Support of McKinley to Succeed Stone.

Two of sixty-five members of the next Missouri Legislature, replying to a request by the Post-Dispatch for their position on the United States senatorship, destined to state for whom they would vote. Both are Democrats, one being E. P. Dorris, Senator from the Twenty-second District, and the other W. F. Coakley, representative from the Second Kansas City District.

The other 63 members, 25 Republicans and 38 Democrats, declared their intention to vote for the respective party nominees chosen in the recent senatorial primary, John C. McKinley and William J. Stone. A few qualified their declarations by speaking of "their present intention," but many, particularly among the Democrats, declared that any other course would seem to them to be treason.

Senator Dorris, who was noncommittal, said he saw no reason for "wiring his vote on United States Senator" and added that he desired "not to confuse but to settle the conditions in the senatorship."

Representative Coakley merely said: "Will not at present state position for United States Senator."

Every one of the 176 members of the next Legislature was asked by the Post-Dispatch to state how he would vote on the senatorship.

Those replying were: 10 Democratic senators and 4 Republicans; 12 Republican representatives and 29 Democrats. Following are the replies received:

SENATORS.
E. P. Dorris (Dem.), Twenty-second District: I see no necessity of any Democratic vote on Senate or House wiring his vote on United States Senator to any person or paper. I prefer not to confuse but to settle the conditions in the senatorship.

Charles F. Krone (Rep.), Twenty-ninth District: For John C. McKinley, the Republican nominee.

Arthur L. Oliver (Dem.), Twenty-third District: With reference to the United States senatorship, will say that I have been informed through the reputable papers of this State that Senator J. Stone was nominated by about 1200 majority, notwithstanding the opposition of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. I have hardly been able to understand how it happened, but if it is true, I suppose I will have to follow the instructions of the primary and support him.

"This true I have not seen this news in 'The First Into Everything' Post-Dispatch, but we Democrats down here are told that a man by the name of Swanger at Jefferson City has counted up the votes and reports that Senator Stone has been elected."

Since the Post-Dispatch has discovered such a "wide discussion" as to warrant it in polling the Forty-fifth General Assembly, will say that I am a Democrat and, like every other self-respecting Democratic Senator and Representative who has any regard for the voice of the people and his solemn pledge and word, I expect to vote for Senator Stone, just as I would have voted for Gov. Folk had he been nominated.

Green for Nominee.
Wallace Green (Dem.), Seventh District: Caucus nominee as determined by the people.

Immett H. Fields (Dem.), Sixth District: I will vote for Senator Stone all the time.

E. A. Dowell (Dem.), Twelfth District: I shall vote for W. J. Stone.

A. E. Metheny (Rep.), Thirtieth District: Will say that I am a Republican selected at the general election in November, 1926, prior to the time the senatorial primary law was enacted. While I in no sense could be obligated by that law, nevertheless, I regard it as a moral duty to vote for the nominee of my party in accordance with the mandate of the vote at this election.

While I cannot say that I approve of the law, as it takes away from the legislator a free voice, such as he is entitled to by the Constitution of the United States, I will, nevertheless, cast my vote for Hon. John C. McKinley as the nominee of our party.

Paterson (Rep.), Thirty-fourth District: John C. McKinley.

Charles H. Mayer (Dem.), Second District: My vote will be for Stone for United States Senator.

Eugene W. Stark (Dem.), Eleventh District: I expect to vote for the party nominee, W. J. Stone.

Treasury to Disregard Primary.
W. S. Allee (Dem.), Twenty-seventh District: I shall vote for Stone, he having received a majority of the Democratic vote. I should deem myself uncharacteristic if I failed to support him.

Samuel C. Major (Dem.), Fourteenth District: In reply to your inquiry, "For whom will your vote be cast for United States Senator?" I will say that it will be cast for Hon. W. J. Stone.

F. S. Hudson (Rep.), Fourth District: Will vote for the Republican nominee for Senator.

James P. Chinn (Dem.), Seventeenth District: I will vote for Senator William J. Stone first, last and all the time.

REPRESENTATIVES.
Thomas Coulter (Dem.), Cass County: Will cast my vote for Stone.

Charles V. Anderson (Rep.), Sixth St. Louis District: I expect to vote for Mr. McKinley for Senator.

Wallace Crossley (Dem.), Johnson County: I shall vote for Senator Stone for re-election. I do not help make laws and then break them.

Frank H. Fosdy (Dem.), Marion County: I will vote for William J. Stone for United States Senator.

Freeman J. Hesselbaine (Rep.), Harrison County: I will support the Republican nominee for United States Senator.

Prather Has No Ax to Grind.
Sidney J. Wade (Dem.), Scott County: For Senator William J. Stone.

William B. Fahy (Dem.), Ralls County: I will vote for W. J. Stone for United States Senator.

Alonso F. Prather (Rep.), Taney County: I expect to cast my vote for the Republican nominee for United States Senator unless some unforeseen condition arises which might cause me to change my mind in the interest of my party or State, having no ax to grind, not even being a candidate for Speaker.

Claude S. Gossett (Dem.), Fifth District: (Kansas City): For the caucus nominee of the Democratic party.

C. H. Folk (Dem.), Iron County: You ask for whom will I vote for United States Senator? To ask your question is to answer it, that is, if the query be made to a Democrat not lost to all sense of duty and honor. I shall vote for William J. Stone in obedience to the express will of the Democrats of Missouri.

Floyd W. Brooks (Rep.), St. Louis County: My vote will be cast for John C. McKinley for United States Senator.

Alexander C. Donan (Dem.), Dent County: Will vote for Hon. W. J. Stone.

Charles F. Carter (Dem.), Clark County: I am not for any factional fight. The Democracy has spoken. I shall vote for W. J. Stone for Senator.

John S. Stanley (Rep.), Webster County: John C. McKinley.

John T. Barker (Dem.), Macon County: I will vote for Stone.

D. E. Adams (Rep.), Caldwell County: McKinley is our candidate. I am a Republican.

F. P. Leickliter (Rep.), Lawrence County: Will vote for Republican nominee for United States Senator.

John T. Miller (Dem.), Saline County: I will obey the instructions of a majority of the Democrats of the State and cast my vote for William J. Stone for United States Senator.

A. W. Mitchell (Rep.), Polk County: John C. McKinley.

Says No Democrat Against Stone.
M. Jack Jones (Dem.), Pike County: I will support W. J. Stone. No Democrat would do otherwise.

James M. Irby (Rep.), Butler County: I will support nominees as long as chance for him.

Franklin for McKinley.
Theodore Trommer (Rep.), Stone County: My vote will be cast for John C. McKinley for United States Senator.

Alfred A. Elkos (Rep.), Fifth St. Louis District: John C. McKinley.

John H. Martin (Rep.), Douglas County: Vote for McKinley first, last and all the time.

Edwin P. Beal (Dem.), Mississippi County: I shall vote for W. J. Stone. The people having selected him, I see no reason why any good Democrat should do otherwise.

Neely Moore (Dem.), Ripley County: My vote will be cast for W. J. Stone for United States Senator.

Henry F. Droste (Rep.), Fourth St. Louis District: Party nominee.

WAELTZ'S BODY EXHUMED; NECK FOUND BROKEN

Belleville Coroner to Examine Farmer's Stomach for Traces of Poison.

DEATH FROM FRACTURE

New Witness Saw Waeltz With Sidney Baker on Street Car.

Midnight disinterment of the body of Peter Waeltz, will be followed by a chemical examination of the stomach and other vital organs, which are now being preserved for the purpose by State's Attorney Tecklenburg of Belleville.

Dr. E. M. Irwin, Coroner of St. Clair County, reported to Mr. Tecklenburg Monday that, in his examination of the body at the grave in Dutch Hill Cemetery after the disinterment early Sunday, he found the neck broken. This fracture, he said, caused death.

Chemical examination, Dr. Irwin believes, will throw additional light on the story told by Miss Nellie Morton, now a prisoner. She accuses her sweetheart, Sidney Baker, now a fugitive, of chloroforming Waeltz in Baker's photograph gallery before the old man's fatal fall down the stairs of the Stookay Building in Belleville.

The physicians are not certain that chloroform would leave a trace which an examination of the stomach would now disclose, but if such a trace were found it would be valuable corroborative evidence.

Coroner Irwin, with Deputy Coroner Spangnagel, went to Dutch Hill Cemetery, which is five miles south of New Athens, St. Clair County, late Saturday night. A. H. Hull, an undertaker, accompanied them, and with the sexton of the cemetery, dug up the body.

Nellie Morton's story has been in part confirmed by Miss Lizzie Fohne of Belleville, whose partial story of the tragedy was told in Sunday's Post-Dispatch. She told how she and Miss Anna Eshelbourn, a bride-elect of the coming week, called at Baker's studio the night of Nov. 21 to take Miss Morton to a dance with them. She told of seeing Waeltz drinking beer there, and said that when she and her companion left, everyone seemed friendly. Miss Morton declined to go to the dance with them.

Lawrence M. Griffith (Dem.), Bates County: I will vote for W. J. Stone for United States Senator.

Coakley Non-Committal.
W. F. Coakley (Dem.), Second Kansas City District: Will not at present state position for United States Senator.

Harvey E. Averill (Dem.), Pemiscot County: My vote will be cast for William J. Stone for United States Senator.

R. S. Walton (Dem.), Howard County: I will vote for W. J. Stone for United States Senator.

Edwin L. Moore (Dem.), Barton County: I shall vote for William J. Stone for United States Senator.

H. P. Scruby (Rep.), Livingston County: Will vote for the Republican nominee for Senator.

Ford for McKinley.
James E. Ford (Rep.), Grundy County: I shall support McKinley for Senator.

James D. Lindsay (Dem.), Henry County: My vote for United States Senator will be cast for W. J. Stone.

Robert T. Abernathy (Dem.), Jasper County: My vote will be cast for William J. Stone for United States Senator.

J. P. Porth (Rep.), Cole County: John C. McKinley.

Jerre T. Muir (Dem.), Lewis County—I shall vote for the nominee for United States Senator.

Harry C. Yates (Dem.), Buchanan County: I will vote for William J. Stone.

W. M. Harrison (Rep.), Miller County: McKinley.

Folk Men Will Vote for Stone.
William H. Shy (Dem.), Reynolds County: I will say that while my county went for Mr. Folk for United States Senator and he was my personal choice, under the late primary law Mr. Stone is the nominee and I consider it my duty to cast the vote of Reynolds County for him.

William Hicks (Dem.), Third Kansas City District: I will say that I consider the popular vote at the general election as binding and shall stand by the caucus nominee, although an appointee of Gov. Folk. I promised my supporters that I would stand by the party nominee, which means that I shall vote for Hon. William J. Stone.

B. F. Johnson (Rep.), Dallas County: I will support McKinley for the senatorship as long as there is a chance for him. Any further I cannot tell at present.

WOMAN TIES ROPE TO ARM, DROWNS HERSELF IN LAKE
NEVADA, Mo., Nov. 20.—Believed to have suddenly been bereft of her reason, Mrs. H. C. Moore, wife of a well-known Nevada business man, tied a rope to one of her arms and threw herself into the lake at Lake Park, a resort owned by her husband.

The body was found about 5 o'clock by a searching party, which located Mrs. Moore's hat on the bank near a bathhouse, following the discovery of her husband and daughter that Mrs. Moore was not at home.

CHICAGO, Nov. 20.—"We know it is only a matter of time when you will get us anyway, so we may as well submit gracefully."

This message over the telephone today reached Peter Dratsburg of the United States Secret Service from one of two men who had flooded the Southwest with spurious $5 bills.

"Come on over and make the pinch," added the voice which named a meeting place.

Shortly afterward Dratsburg appeared at the Federal building with his two prisoners, Gustav Bayer and Henry Michaels. They said they had grown tired of trying to elude the detectives. They were held under $500 bonds to the Federal grand jury.

The telephone message was preceded by a letter to Capt. Porter from St. Louis, as follows:

"We are sending you all the counterfeit money we have and you can call in all the men that are looking for us and we will be in your office Dec. 1. Yours with repentance."

"H. MICHAELS."
The men followed their letter from St. Louis, but their arrival was very early and rather than wait for the secret service office to open, they called up an operative.

BRIDE WHO DIED FIVE DAYS AFTER SHE WAS MARRIED

There Were 72 Last Year, but Number of Wounded Is Increased.

CHICAGO, Nov. 20.—The hunting season for deer which closes tomorrow has been much less deadly than those of previous years. Only 57 persons were killed this year, against 72 in 1927 and 74 in 1928.

The total of injured shows an increase in the number for 1928, being 91, against 81 in 1927, and 79 in 1926.

Over half the fatal accidents happened in the states of Illinois, Michigan, Minnesota and Wisconsin, the number in these states being seven, six, eight and 17 respectively.

Unusual features this year were the killing of two women. Mrs. Jacob Ganta of Warsaw, Ind., was killed by her husband, who had shot at a hawk.

Mrs. Albert Skinner of Peru, Ind., was accidentally shot and killed by her husband as he was starting on a hunting trip. Sidney B. Tremble, a Chicago broker, was shot by Frank Stuart, his hunting companion, in Kansas, and died of death.

Judge J. C. McKinnon of Marianna, Ark., also was killed. A hunting companion attempted to climb a fence carrying three guns. One was discharged and Judge McKinnon received the charge in the abdomen. Five of the dead were mistaken for deer and ten were drowned.

DOCTOR'S BRIDE DIES FIVE DAYS AFTER WEDDING

Mrs. Paul Pritchett Succumbs After Few Hours' Illness at Laclede Hotel.

Mrs. Paul Pritchett, a bride of five days, died at the Laclede Hotel at 10 a. m. Monday, after an acute illness of a few hours. She was 20 years old.

She was formerly Miss Bertha Holt, daughter of the late Judge R. A. Holt of Lebanon, Mo. She was married last Tuesday afternoon to Dr. Paul Pritchett, a St. Louisian. The wedding took place at the parsonage of the First M. E. Church South, the Rev. Dr. P. C. Fletcher performing the ceremony.

Dr. Pritchett is the son of the Rev. Dr. J. H. Pritchett, one of the leaders of Southern Methodism in Missouri. The veteran minister now lives in Lebanon, and the young physician, practicing there for a time, became acquainted while there with Miss Holt.

Recent Death in Family.
The Rev. Joseph J. Pritchett, formerly pastor of the Methodist Church South in Sedalia, a son of the Rev. Dr. Pritchett, died less than two weeks ago. Because of his death it was decided not to make a public ceremony of the Pritchett-Holt wedding and the quiet ceremony at the parsonage was substituted for the more elaborate one at first planned.

Dr. Pritchett and his bride went to the Laclede Hotel for a few days, and Friday the young wife became sick. Her husband treated her, and she seemed to show improvement.

Funeral in Lebanon.
Sunday night Mrs. Pritchett was attacked with acute inflammation of the bowels. Treatment given by Dr. Pritchett and other physicians whom he called in was ineffectual and she died a few minutes after midnight.

The body was removed from the hotel to Collins' undertaking establishment. It was decided to take it to Lebanon on Monday afternoon's Frisco train, and the funeral will be held there.

Dr. Pritchett is one of the proprietors of the Barnes Pharmacy at Garrison and Lawton avenues. He is a successful young physician.

Dr. T. B. Mansfield, a friend of the Pritchetts, was called after it was seen that Mrs. Pritchett's condition was critical. He confirmed the diagnosis of the husband. Dr. David Forster of 328 Raymond avenue was called shortly before the young woman's death.

Former State Senator J. W. Farris, a cousin of the bride, called on the grief-stricken husband Monday, and arranged to accompany him to Lebanon with the body.

CAPTAIN HAINS TELLS STORY OF ANNIS TRAGEDY

Slayer Denies Any Knowledge of Killing Except What He Has Been Told.

By Leased Wire from the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.
NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—In the dim twilight of his cell in the County Jail at Long Island City, Capt. Peter C. Hains talked with a reporter from the Post-Dispatch, giving for the first time his version of the events that led up to his killing William E. Annis, the magazine publisher, last August at the Bayside Yacht Club.

"I've come here, Capt. Hains, to ask if you would not like to tell, through the Post-Dispatch, your side of the trouble that brought you here," said the visitor.

"There's nothing I can say," he replied. "Torrey, my brother, can tell you all you want to know."

"Tell what you remember of the shooting at Bayside," was urged.

"Capt. Hains started from his bench. 'I don't know anything about that,' he replied. 'I only know what Torrey has told me about it. I don't know where Bayside is. I don't think I was ever there.'"

"He stole my wife," I did not shoot Annis; they tell me I did," he continued. "It is all queer. I knew Annis. I knew him very well. He used to come to my house. He was one of my friends. He ate at my table. He stole my wife."

"I went to the divorce court and there I intended to get my satisfaction. I wanted to get a separation from the woman I had loved beyond anything else in life. I did not want to harm Annis. I had no thought of it in my mind. I thought the courts would attend to him. My mind gave way and what came after that I do not know."

Capt. Hains arose and paced his narrow cell.

"Oh, if I could only get this thing out of my mind," he cried. "I love Claudia. She was everything to me."

"Would you like to see her again?"

"No," came the reply in a softened tone. "I have tried to forget her."

"Do you recall having a revolver at Bayside that day?"

"I tell you I remember nothing of Bayside. I always carried a revolver. When you ask if I remember having my revolver at Bayside I say I was not there."

"His Wife Always Loving."

Capt. Hains was asked to tell of his trip to the Philippines, which ended in his receiving the packet of letters at San Francisco.

"I went away to the Philippines last November," he began. "I left Claudia at Fort Hamilton, and she was as loving a wife as man could want. Up to that time we had never had a harsh word. I kissed her good-by and told her to take good care of herself and the children. She promised she would. I left with a heavy heart, because I hated to leave her."

"I made two trips to the Philippines. The first one ended in January, I think, and I was ordered back on the transport Crook. I was in the Philippines two weeks when the Crook was ordered back to San Francisco. All this time I had not received any letters from Claudia. She did not know where I was to be."

"When the Crook hauled in at San Francisco a packet of letters from Claudia was handed to me. I was eager to get some word from her and tore the first open as fast as I could get to it. What I read amazed me. Claudia spoke of drinking and smoking cigarettes at Fort Hamilton. She told of disgraceful times that had been going on."

"Letters Told of Orgies."

"I could not believe what I read. I looked at the letter and read it over and over. Then I opened the rest of them. In nearly every one of them Claudia told of drinking. I had never known her to drink in the way she wrote about. She might have taken a little wine at home, but in these letters she described drinking orgies that were terrible. Her letters were all so queer. They seemed cold and not like my Claudia."

Capt. Hains paused and his eyes filled with tears.

"I wondered if Claudia could have forgotten her love for me," he went on. "The thought of it maddened me. I thought of all the terrible things she pictured in the letters and the more I thought of it the more dazed I became. My mind was confused. There was but one thing for me to do and that was to get back to Fort Hamilton as fast as I could."

"I went to the commander and told him I must go to Fort Hamilton at once. He said it was impossible. I had to explain that my wife needed me. 'Then you may go,' he said. It was well he did, for I would have had to go without his permission if he had still refused me."

"I do not remember much about that trip to Fort Hamilton. I recall getting on the train. I did not sleep all the way to New York. I don't know how I got there. All I know is that I was suffering all the time."

"Miss Blank on Trip."

Thornton Hains, who had stepped up to the Captain's cell, interrupted the narrative to ask if the Captain recalled having left the train at Chicago and acting so strangely that the station man threatened to have him arrested. Capt. Hains declared he did not remember stopping at Chicago.

"I thought I came straight on to New York," he said. "I know I wanted to be there as soon as I could. I cannot recall how I got to Fort Hamilton, whether I took a trolley or an elevated train."

"When I reached the fort my brain was in a whirl. I sought Claudia and found her sitting on the steps of Lieut. Andrus' quarters. Lieut. Andrus and I had been great friends. Claudia looked at me as though she were surprised. I did not know her any word that I was coming. I had forgotten to do it."

"I remember that she rushed forward to kiss me. I wanted to know first about what she had written to me, and I don't think I kissed her—but I don't remember about that. Maybe I did kiss her. I took Claudia into our old quarters and told her I wanted to know what she had been doing. I spoke of her letters and said I could not believe what she had written."

"Wife Denied Wrongdoing."

"Claudia put her arms around me and kissed me. She told me she had no means what she wrote—that it wasn't anything. She had been lonely some but had not done any wrong. I was so happy to hear that that I took her in my lap and kissed her. Then we had a good talk and I told you I was relieved. Claudia told me she was wrong when she said she did not love me any more; that she had never forgotten me from the day I left."

"While we were talking she told me that the officers at the post or some of them, had been connecting her name with that of Annis. 'What? My friend Billy Annis?' I asked her. 'Yes,' she replied. 'It's all wrong for them to do that. I have seen him only a few times, and you know that there wasn't any wrong in that.'"

"I believed her. I will defend your name here to these officers," I said. "I will rehabilitate you." Then I told her to telephone Annis to come to dinner with us that night. As I remember it was the night of May 21. My wife seemed pleased at the way I had spoken, and left to go to the telephone. I waited at our quarters. The telephone she used was at the quarters of

As I remember it was the night of May 21. My wife seemed pleased at the way I had spoken, and left to go to the telephone. I waited at our quarters. The telephone she used was at the quarters of another officer. We did not have one in our house."

"Claudia was gone a long time and I went to see what had happened to her. I found her standing at the telephone talking. When I came up I asked her if Annis was coming over to the house for dinner. She hesitated and called through the telephone to Annis to ask him if he was coming over. She had to repeat it and I wondered why. 'Give me that telephone,' I said to her. I called over the wire to Annis, but he did not seem to know what I was talking about."

"I could not get it through my head why he acted so queerly, when I spoke of dinner, but let it go when Claudia said he would be over to go automobile riding that night. We had a good time on the ride. Annis appeared not to have a care in the world and was just as hearty in his manner with me as he had ever been. When he left for home that night we were the best of friends."

"My awakening came the next day, when I learned from some of the officers at the fort that what Claudia had told me was gossip had actually happened. That night I questioned her about it in our room. She cried and confessed that she had been deceiving me—that she loved Annis and they had been together."

"My God! It was an awful blow to me. Claudia collapsed after making her confession. Although frenzied by her admission of wrong, I pitied her. I sent a telegram to her mother telling her to come at once to Claudia, and then left the house and went with Torney (pet name for Thornton).

"We talked it over and I told Torney we would get a divorce from Claudia. He advised me to let her go to Dakota and let her get a divorce herself for the sake of the children. I told him I could not do that; that she would then get the children and would hold them as hostages. I insisted that I must sue and let the courts punish her and Annis."

"Maddened by Accusations."

"So the suit was filed, and in a few weeks Claudia put in her counter-suit, in which she made those accusations against me. Her letters had been ghastly enough; her confession was horrible, but the charges she made against me were worse of all. I cannot tell how I felt. Everything seemed to slip from me. My mind became blank. I knew that Annis inspired those charges. Claudia could not have done it."

Capt. Hains insisted that never in his presence had his wife indulged in excessive drinking.

"We had nothing in our house in the way of liquor," he declared. "I never drank anything, excepting possibly a couple of whiskeys a week. Claudia never had any inclination for drink while she was with me. That made my amazement all the more when I read her letters telling of the revelries at Fort Hamilton."

"As for cigarette smoking, I never saw Claudia indulge in it."

Capt. Hains paused and looked at Thornton.

"I don't see why they have him here," he said. "Torrey has been a true brother to me. They ought not to make him stay here because of anything I did."

Capt. Hains put his arm around his brother's shoulder.

"They must let you go," he cried. "It's not right."

PAUL REVERE'S RIDE A MYTH, ACCORDING TO NOTE WRITTEN BY JOHN HANCOCK IN 1775

Letter Indicates That Patriots at Lexington Knew of British Movement.

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—Walter Benjamin, a publisher, has a document which he believes proves that Paul Revere never made the midnight ride attributed to him by Longfellow and tradition. It is a letter from John Hancock to Elbridge Gerry, dated Lexington, April 18, 1775, at 9 o'clock. This was the night before the battle and three hours before Revere, according to Longfellow, "crossed the bridge into Medford town."

The letter reads:

"Dear sir: I am much obliged for your notice. It is said the officers are gone along the Concord road, and I will send word thither. I am fully agreed with you that we ought to be serious, and I hope your decision will be effectual. I intended doing myself the pleasure of being with you tomorrow. My respects to the committee. I am your real friend, JOHN HANCOCK."

Mr. Benjamin says if Hancock of the Committee of Safety knew at 9 o'clock troops had gone along the Concord road, Lexington and Concord were fully aroused to the danger and there would have been no need for Paul Revere to send "through the night" his cry of alarm to every Middlesex village and farm."

The guarded expressions in the note, Benjamin says, were due to the treacherous times when Hancock might expect to have his mail seized and did not want to have the correspondence betray more information than was absolutely necessary."

The evidence of the Hancock letter to Gerry has been made known before, for it was published in 1928 in the rare "Life of Gerry," but the date with the hour of 9 o'clock was omitted, so that, printed with others, it caused no comment. In the original copy the date is there in Hancock's writing.

BURGLARS WERE IMAGINARY, BUT SHOOTING WAS ACTUAL

Scared Neighbors Failed to Respond to Eppinger's Call for Assistance.

John F. Eppinger of 2651 Hebert street gave his neighbors a scare when he went into his back yard and fired his revolver five times and then cried out: "I'm shot! Come out and help me."

When the Sabbath evening stillness was thus disturbed the neighbors didn't turn out to rescue Eppinger. They put out their lights and hid under their beds, fearing that stray bullets might strike them.

In the Dayton Street Police Court Monday Eppinger couldn't remember much about it.

"I thought burglars were around and I shot to scare them away," he said. He was fined $50 for peace disturbance and $50 for discharging a firearm.

Patriotism

The stomach is a larger factor in "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness" than most people are aware of. Patriotism can withstand hunger but not dyspepsia. The confirmed dyspeptic "is fit for treason, stratagems and spoils." The man who goes to the front for his country with a weak stomach will be a weak soldier and a fault finder.

A sound stomach makes for good citizenship as well as for health and happiness.

GREAT DEMAND ON CHRISTMAS FUND EXPECTED

Many Former Contributors to Charity Will Be Beneficiaries This Year.

LARGER SUM REQUIRED

Wage Earners Unable to Contribute With Their Accustomed Generosity.

The annual fund to provide a Christmas dinner and toys and entertainment for the children of the poor, which has been provided by the generous people of St. Louis through the Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival Association, will, in the opinion of the association, be more pressing than necessary this year than ever before.

Heretofore the fund has been raised largely through the contributions of wage-earners. This year economic conditions are so different that it would be unjust, no less than unwarranted, to expect those wage-earners to respond as liberally as in former seasons.

Many of these working men and women are already burdened with the support of others less fortunate in the matter of employment, while still many others have only resumed their occupations after enforced idleness.

The demand upon the fund this year, by reason of these conditions, is sure to be heavier than ever before. Indeed many former contributors are sure to be beneficiaries this Christmas.

The Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival Association calls the earnest attention to these conditions of everyone who has in the past helped to support this great act of hospitality to the unfortunate, and presents the worthiness of it to those who have not been so fortunate in the past to contribute to it.

For several years those in St. Louis who might otherwise have gone without their share of the good cheer of the season, have been provided with a generous dinner in their homes, with toys and candy for the little ones, who would have experienced the tragedy of "the empty stocking," than which there can be no greater in the life of a little child.

Contributions should be sent now while the subject is before you. They should be sent to the Post-Dispatch, the custodian of the fund, and will be promptly acknowledged in the columns of this paper. The association respectfully asks all who receive contribution lists of the association to see that employees and others who desire to contribute have an opportunity to do so.

"LORD" BARRINGTON PROVEN TO BE NOTED ENGLISH CROOK

Measurements and Finger Prints From Scotland Yard Fit Missouri Convict.

All doubt that F. Seymour (Lord) Barrington, serving a life sentence in the Jefferson City Penitentiary for the murder of James McCann, is the famous English crook, Frederick George Barton, has been set at rest, according to dispatches from Jefferson City.

H. A. Dudley, superintendent of the Bechtel system in the Penitentiary, has received a complete record of the British criminal, including finger prints which in every line and curve coincide with those of Barrington. The photographs sent from Scotland Yard also are easily recognizable as those of the bogus "lord."

This, officials at Jefferson City believe, disposes of the well-meant but mistaken contention of Mrs. Lillian Gates of 4137 Westminster place, who has sought clemency for Barrington in the belief that he was not Barton.

Barrington, though he is not considered a model convict, has given the guards no trouble in the year he has been in the Penitentiary. He is working as clerk in one of the prison shoe factories.

MRS. POTTER IN VAUDEVILLE. REFUSES $100,000 FOR NAME

Declares "I Will Not Be Clay in the Hands of the Potters."

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—"Mrs. James Brown Potter" will be "top-lined" on flaring street posters and on a "two-a-day" vaudeville program, very soon.

Mrs. James Brown Potter has concluded with William Morris, Inc., to play a 30-weeks' engagement in the Morris chain of independent vaudeville houses. Two thousand dollars a week will be the salary.

Mrs. Potter's transition from the legitimate to the vaudeville stage will astonish the theatrical profession, probably; it will displease some wealthy and fashionably persons certainly.

The actress has been offered $100,000 it is said, to drop the name Potter or call herself Mrs. or Miss Cora Urquhart Potter. She rejected the offer with the remark:

"I will not be clay in the hands of the Potters."

Miss "Frit" Potter, the charming daughter of Mrs. James Brown Potter, married James A. Stillman Jr., whose father is president of the National City Bank, commonly known as "the Rockefeller bank."

POPE ILL. GLENNON VISIT OFF

Slight Fever Causes Cancellation of St. Louisian's Audience.

ROME, Nov. 30.—Pope Pius X has a slight fever today and was obliged to remain in bed. Dr. Patucci and Marabaffa announced that with proper care and rest they felt sure that no complications would arise.

All audiences have been suspended, including those of Archbishop Glennon of St. Louis and Bishop Allen of Mobile.

His cold is worse and a fever has developed which obliges the pontiff to remain in bed. His physicians declare his condition not to be serious, but the public is becoming apprehensive.

HOSPITAL FUND ABOUT $40,000; BREAKS RECORD

Collections This Year $2000 to $3000 Greater Than in 1907.

More individuals, by thousands, contributed to the work of the Hospital Saturday and Sunday Association this year than in any past year. The total fund, exceeding $40,000, will be $2000 to $3000 larger than in 1907, the exact amount depending on the sum collected in the churches and Sunday schools.

But the heads of the association congratulate themselves most on the increased number of persons who have become interested in the work.

Realizing that the number of contributors in office buildings had about reached its limit, through the systematic canvassing of past years, the leaders in the work this year appealed also to the factories and other places whose employees do not find their way into the office buildings.

Subscription blanks were circulated in these places, and small sums were given by thousands of persons who never contributed to the work before. The total from trades and professions given in this manner was $5000, while the employees gave $5000.

It is hoped that the church collections, which are being counted now, will be almost as large as last year. The weather was bad, but the collections were taken in more churches than ever before.

Mrs. E. F. Goltra, society leader and wife of a millionaire, is being widely congratulated for her pluck in selling newspapers at Seventh and Olive streets for the fund Saturday.

The Columbian Club, which made the greater part of its collections Sunday, raised $1042.50, as compared with $600 last year. The largest contribution was $50, and most of the money given was in bills.

A ladies' committee assisted in making the collections, the members being Mrs. L. P. Aloe, Mrs. Jacob Meyer, Mrs. Leon Schwab, Mrs. Edward Woolf, Mrs. Jacob Stern, Mrs. Edward Schiele, Mrs. Jacob Woolf, Mrs. Morris Woolf, Mrs. C. M. Rice, Mrs. Julius Glaser, Mrs. Milton Cohen and Mrs. Zetta Joseph.

"OLD UNCLE TOM," FRIEND OF THE CHILDREN, BURIED

Many Little Ones Attend St. Louis Park Keeper O'Brien's Funeral.

Many of the children whom he loved and who for years had been his chosen companions attended the funeral of "Old Uncle Tim" O'Brien at the Sacred Heart Church Monday.

O'Brien was custodian of St. Louis Park, at St. Louis avenue and Twenty-first street. He died at his home, 1947 Madison street, Saturday of Bright's disease. He was 69 years old and is survived by his wife and his daughter, Mrs. D. F. Noonan.

He served as keeper of the park under Mayor Noonan's administration, but was laid out by Mayor Walbridge. He was reappointed by Mayor Wells eight years ago.

His kind treatment of the children who went to play in the park was proverbial in North St. Louis.

7 LIVES KNOWN TO BE LOST IN WESTERN FLOOD

Thousands Flee From Rivers Which Are Rising a Foot an Hour.

GUTHRIE, Ok., Nov. 30.—With seven known dead, according to reports from the flooded regions of Oklahoma, Texas, Southwestern Missouri and Southern Kansas, several persons missing, enormous loss occasioned and the rivers still rising, in some instances almost a foot an hour, the worst flood in years is expected to reach its peak.

Nearly 5000 persons are homeless, while the rising waters threaten to add hundreds to the list of fugitives before the day is over. Terrific rains lasting for nearly 30 hours are responsible.

The list of dead so far compiled includes: Nora Coleman, drowned near Vinita; Claude McPherson, killed in a wreck caused by the flood; Mr. and Mrs. Peter Thorpe and Miss Thorpe, drowned near Roby, Tex.

Two unidentified men reported drowned near Vinita.

Rescue Parties in Boats. Scores of rescue parties in boats are today scouting the flooded districts to relieve hundreds in danger through the flooding of their homes during the night. The full loss of life cannot be estimated until they return. All night a few men in boats worked taking people from the flooded homes. Distress signals were fired frequently.

Cottonwood River was the scene of the drowning of the three Thorpes. Their carriage toppled off a bridge and Thorpe, his bride and a sister were drowned.

Nora Coleman met death when she was swept from her horse while trying to ford Mustang Creek.

Track Undermined, Train Wrecked. Near El Reno the rains undermined the Frisco tracks, resulting in the wreck of a train. Brakeman McPherson leaped from a car and was caught in the wreckage and killed. No account of the drowning of the two men near Vinita has been given.

Practically every river throughout this region has been affected. Latest reports say the Arkansas and Neosho are rising four inches an hour. The Cottonwood River here is rising a foot an hour. The Cimarron River is high out of its banks and Kingfisher is practically under water. Kansas and Missouri streams are also affected.

Miles of railroad tracks have been washed out and traffic in many directions is at a standstill.

While enormous loss has been caused, farmers will benefit to the extent of thousands of dollars, however, owing to the rains.

No Potatoes, Hits Wife, Fined. For striking his wife, as she alleges, because she hadn't cooked any potatoes for dinner on their third wedding anniversary, Frank Kuhlmeier of 4108 California avenue was fined $25 in the Wyoming Street Police Court Monday.

"WELCOME" IN ELECTRIC SIGN FILLS CHURCH IN BALTIMORE

Pastor Says It Is Necessary to Compete With Theaters to Draw Crowds.

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 30.—The Seventh Baptist Church has been decorated by the pastor, the Rev. John Roach Stratton, with an electric sign covering the entire front portals and containing 42 incandescent globes which spell "Welcome." As a result the church was crowded last night.

Mr. Stratton was highly gratified with the first night's result of his experiment. He said all those who thought it savored of sensationalism have been won over.

"I had thought," he said today, "of displaying my topics in electric light also, but found that was not feasible. The theaters," he continued, "display the names of their current attractions in electric signs. Places of amusement are in a blaze of attractiveness, while the church stands a forlorn, dark and exclusive. The church, to attract men, must compete with the attractions of other places."

The pastor added that the sign would not be used for commercial purposes, such as bazaars.

The Post-Dispatch is the only evening newspaper in St. Louis that receives or publishes news gathered by the Associated Press.

MERCHANT TRYING TO ENTER BANK VAULT IS ARRESTED

Police Watch Him Boring in Concrete, Wounded While Trying to Escape.

BEAUMONT, Tex., Nov. 30.—After watching him for some hours boring through a 30-inch concrete floor into the vault of the First National Bank of this city the police today surprised and arrested William Bretschneider, proprietor of a "peny arcade."

Bretschneider attempted to escape, but was captured after receiving a bullet in his forearm.

Efforts to break into the vault had been in progress for several days. The cashier of the bank, J. C. Pendron, accidentally discovered the hole where it had been started in the floor of a vacant room directly above the vault.

The police were told and officers who secreted themselves claim they witnessed the efforts of Bretschneider through the greater part of the night before he was taken into custody shortly before daylight.

Needlework Guild Reception. The annual reception and exhibition of the International Needlework Guild will take place at the Second Baptist Church, 8 to 5 p. m. Monday.

The Guild this year will distribute 7000 garments among 36 St. Louis charitable institutions. Mrs. John G. Chapman is president.

Belleville Pastor Goes East. Rev. William M. Gardner Sunday tendered his resignation as pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Belleville to accept a call from the First Presbyterian Church at Batavia, N. Y. He has been pastor of the Belleville church for five years.

BELLEVILLE TOLD IT RAISES "HELL" INSTEAD OF MEN

College Head Declares the Town Is Intrinsically Behind

'WAR CAUSED BY DRINK'

Speaker Asserts Conflict of
'61-'65 Was Brought On by Drunk Congressmen.

Dr. John Harmon, president of McKendree College, Lebanon, Ill., talking to an audience that filled the First M. E. Church at Belleville Sunday night, told them that Belleville was intrinsically behind beer bottles, that St. Clair County was "raising hell instead of men," that he saw 10 times as many drunkards as in a 10,000-mile journey, and a few more things like that.

He also charged that the Civil War was caused by the fiery speeches of drunken congressmen.

"When a preacher goes to a new church," he said, "it is the rule for a committee to call around in a few days and ask him not to preach on the temperance question, for fear that it will hurt the church. They made that request of me. I told them I would not preach on temperance except occasionally, when I felt like it."

Says Churches Must Combine.

"If I were running hell and were the boss of the business I wouldn't give a hearty welcome to a church or a minister afraid to tackle the saloon. When the time comes that every minister takes a stand against it, with his church behind him, it will be good-by to the saloon. Any church that won't fight the saloon deserves to be buried in the ecclesiastical potter's field."

REV. J. F. HARMON

one foul breath from the nostrils of hell but comes through the saloon. The American saloon killed Abraham Lincoln. It killed McKinley. It brought on the War of the Rebellion. There would have been no Civil War but for the speeches of the hot-headed men in Congress. They would not have been hot-headed if they had not been drunk on the floor of Congress. It was their drunken, fiery speeches that sent our boys to death.

"The saloon is back of every hellish outrage in this country. It is back of the bloody treatment that the Indians have suffered at the hands of the white man. It was the fire-water that white men sold them that caused their uprisings, which in turn brought upon them the white man's vengeance. It is back of every act of mob violence in the North or the South. It is back of the violence of strikes. It is not the laboring men who commit excesses when there is a strike. It is the wild drunkard who hangs out the outside.

Twenty-two Killed by Drink.

"Saloon keepers have told me more about the saloon than anybody else. 'You don't begin to realize the foulness of the business,' they have said to me.

"When the local option fight was on in the Legislature the whiskey people could not get representatives from other parts of the State to introduce their bills. They had to come to the St. Clair County representatives. They said St. Clair County was the worst whiskey county in the State, and the man from St. Clair County was the worst whiskey bill would be re-elected by a double majority.

Town Behind Beer Bottles.
"Belleville has some people who are as good as any that live, but Belleville is a part of the blackness of St. Clair County. Belleville is thoroughly entrenched behind beer bottles. Still, if the righteous people in Belleville would stand together, they would find more support back of them than they think. When the righteous are in power there is a big scramble of the cowards to get on the band wagon.

"I hear it claimed that Belleville is a moral and clean and sober city and the blindest spot this side of heaven. But they don't do things in heaven the way they do them in Belleville."

WORLD REGRETS PUBLICATION OF HALE INTERVIEW

Cables von Buelow Accepting His Verdict on the Article.

ERROR CAUSED BY HALE

Word From Him Would Have Caused Suppression of Publication Altogether.

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—The World yesterday sent the following cable message concerning the Hale interview, which also was printed in the Post-Dispatch:

"Prince von Buelow, Imperial Chancellor, Berlin: After a painstaking investigation, the New York World finds no convincing basis of fact for its published synopsis of the Hale interview with His Majesty, the German Emperor. It accepts your verdict that the alleged interview ascribed to the Emperor 'stupidly absurd words which he cannot have uttered.'"

"As a matter of simple justice to the German Emperor and the German people, the World will print an editorial leader Monday morning expressing its sincere regret at the publication of a synopsis which it regards as misleading and mischievous.

"It was an honest mistake, committed merely through oversight, without the knowledge of the proprietor or chief editor and so late at night that the article did not appear in the first edition. Proofs of the synopsis sent to the author of the interview had been corrected in his own handwriting and this was naturally accepted as evidence that the article as printed was personally approved by him."

"THE NEW YORK WORLD."

Text of Editorial.

The World editorial printed today is as follows:

"CORRECTION.
"After a painstaking inquiry the World frankly declares that it finds no convincing basis of fact for the so-called synopsis of the Hale interview with the German Emperor.

"When Prince von Buelow informed the Berlin correspondent of the Petit Parisien that the New York World's version of the interview ascribed to the Kaiser 'stupidly absurd words which he cannot have uttered,' the German Chancellor pronounced a judgment which the World accepts as the correct conclusion to be drawn from its own investigation, at least so far as the personally offensive expressions imputed to the Kaiser are concerned.

"The Rev. Dr. Hale seems to have told various persons, including his editorial chiefs in the New York Times office, about his conversation with the Kaiser, of which he was tremendously proud. He had hawked the manuscript of the interview around the offices of various periodicals, and after its suppression by the Century, a great volume of gossip was in circulation. When the World obtained what purported to be a synopsis of the Rev. Dr. Hale's own account of the Kaiser's remarks, it submitted the proofs of the article to him and he read them. Ten words from him would have made publication impossible; yet he contented himself with the exclusion of several statements that slightly involved his personal vanity, leaving every essential paragraph untouched.

Reporter Not to Blame.

"The World fully believes its reporter swore truly when he made affidavit that the Rev. Dr. Hale suggested no changes whatever except those in his own handwriting on the proof slips, and gave no intimation that the synopsis was otherwise inaccurate. His own corrections marked on the margin of the proof slips are conclusive as to the issue of veracity.

"The Rev. Dr. Hale was plainly willing that the synopsis should be printed, provided he were left free to disavow it afterward. As a subordinate employee of our esteemed contemporary, the New York Times, whose able and successful chief editorial manager, Mr. William C. Reideck, is under personal obligations to the Kaiser for the Order of the Crown, and might sharply resent any public betrayal of the Emperor's confidence, such a course would very well serve the Rev. Dr. Hale's self-interest while gratifying his extreme vanity and his appetite for further international notoriety.

Story Hastily Prepared.

"It is fair to add, perhaps, that neither the proprietor, chief editor nor any of the managers of The World had knowledge of this synopsis until after it was printed. The article did not appear in the first edition, which is evidence of the undue haste with which, unfortunately, it was sent to press at a late hour of the night in the honest belief that the Rev. Dr. Hale in personally correcting the proofs had affirmed the truth of every statement he left untouched.

"The World nevertheless, holds no brief for the doctrine of journalistic fallibility and is not afraid to admit its errors. We believe that the German Emperor is entitled to the same measure of justice that every honorable newspaper should accord to prince and pauper alike.

"Convinced that the Kaiser could not have uttered—and least of all to a total stranger—some of the 'stupidly absurd words' attributed to him, the World sincerely regrets the published synopsis of the Hale interview as mistaken, misleading and mischievous.

Fireless Cooker Is Practical.
From the Indianapolis News.
The principle of the fireless cooker, which has been known for years, is that the heat already absorbed, in more or less similar to all, but in the more modern forms of a durable, sanitary nature, and the principle adapted to baking and roasting in the latter case the heater is stored in the heat. The radiators are heated over flame or by electricity in connection with the heater, and the heat is stored in the use of gas, oil or coal. It is stated, however, that the principle is practically demonstrated.

White House Won't Go Dry Even Though Taft Turns Glass Down

President-Elect's Course Accepted as Purely a Personal Matter.

ST. LOUISANS PLEASED

They Say He Has Set an Excellent Example for Young Admirers.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—Taft may swear off drinking, but that does not mean that the White House will be loaded on the water wagon. That is the way Washington takes the news from Hot Springs that Taft is turning down his wine glasses at dinner. There has been no teetotaler regime in the President's house since Mrs. Hayes kept wine and liquors off the table during the administration of her husband. That was a serious affair and the capitol was glad when it was over.

The diplomats dreaded the Hayes official dinner and the example had a subduing effect throughout official society. It was also great for the jokersmiths. Since then there has been no non-drinking presidents, although President McKinley confined his "sip" to glasses of whiskey when he was cold or tired and almost not at his meals. Mrs. McKinley in her private home served no wines but made no objection to their being used at the White House.

It is understood that Taft quit drinking because even slight uses of alcohol made him "take on flesh."

Condition Is Not Serious.

"Taft's swearing off is not a serious matter so far as the rest of us are concerned," said a good liver at the Willard Hotel. "All the wine and liquor he would take in months would not make one good drink for Senator Stewart, who is the most robust man, nearly eighty years old, at the capitol. When you ask Senator Stewart how he keeps so rugged in his old age, he always replies: 'Plenty of old whisky after dinner, before going to bed.' Taft's swearing off is not worth mentioning."

Of all the men who have been mentioned for the Taft cabinet not one is a total abstainer.

Senator Culley of Texas does not smoke, drink, chew or swear, but admits that his example probably had no influence upon Judge Taft.

Senator Cullum said he would rather have good pumpkin pie at dinner than champagne, but he did not hope to have the White House put pie on the menu for the diplomatic dinners.

Charles F. Taft said his was not a family trait and he did not understand that the swearing off would affect him.

What St. Louisans Think About Taft's Inverted Wine Glass

Prominent St. Louisans approve of the use which President-elect Taft made of his glass in turning it down at a dinner at Hot Springs, Va., and of his expressed intention to keep it turned down.

Here are some expressions by St. Louisans:

James E. Smith, president of the Business Men's League: It seems to me that what Mr. Taft does with his glass is a matter which concerns only himself. In other words, it is a personal matter. To be sure, he occupies a very high position, and it is perhaps incumbent upon him to set an example. Taking that view of it, his act is very commendable.

E. J. Moore, superintendent of the Missouri Anti-Saloon League: Coming from Ohio, as I do, and after five years' residence in the city of Cincinnati, I am not surprised that Mr. Taft has turned down his glass to stay. Every thoughtful citizen will respect our President-elect for the course he has taken. Such a step will meet with the approval of the majority in this great republic. Mr. Taft has set an example for the splendid body of young men that supported him at the polls, which many will follow.

Mrs. F. H. Ingalls, president of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union: Mr. Taft is just smart enough to yield to public opinion. The Woman's Christian Temperance Union has been carrying on educational work for 35

FEEBLE OLD LADY Has Strength Restored by Vinol.

Mrs. Michael Bloom of Lewistown, Pa., who is 60 years of age, says: "For long time I have been so feeble that I have had to be wheeled around in an invalid's chair. I had no strength and took cold at the slightest provocation, which invariably settled on my legs, and a cough would result. My legs learned of the cod liver preparation called Vinol, and procured a bottle for me. It built up my strength quickly, and after taking three bottles I am able to do most of my work, and can walk a quarter of a mile easily. My aged or weak person who requires strength should try Vinol. I am lighted with what it has done for me. It is a body builder and strength restorer for old people, delicate children, run-down persons, and after meals, Vinol is unexcelled. If it is to give satisfaction we will tell you money."

MINOR

years. It is now reaching results. Prohibition sentiment has become so strong all over the United States that Mr. Taft, feeling the pulse of the country, has turned down his glass in obedience to the dictates of that sentiment. His judgment and sentiment have been that way, but he has not had the moral courage to come out. But the sentiment became so strong that it could not be resisted. Now that the first man of the country has turned down his glass, I hope that other men whose principles are all right, but who have been lacking in courage, will follow his example. Every man who occupies a high public position should be a total abstainer for the sake of his example.

Ben Blewett, superintendent of public schools: What Mr. Taft does with his glass is a matter that should be left entirely to his own judgment. He has shown that he is capable of exercising it. It is not more incumbent upon a man in a high official position to be an abstainer than it is upon a man in a more humble position. I imagine that Mr. Taft thought it would be to his physical advantage to discontinue drinking, and that he turned his glass down for that reason.

Rolla Wells, Mayor of St. Louis: What Mr. Taft does with his glass is a matter for his individual conscience. I do not think it is proper to discuss his announcement or to indicate a line of conduct for another individual.

John F. Boyce, Supply Commissioner: I think Mr. Taft is the best judge of his own habits. He knows the need of his abstemiousness better than I do.

James Y. Player, Comptroller: It has always been understood that Mr. Taft is a temperate man. I don't think it was necessary for him to announce that he was taking to discontinue his practice of taking a drink once in ten days or so.

Patrick J. Regan, City Register: That's fine. Mr. Taft recognizes that the time has come when a public official who occupies such a high place must not drink. Mr. Taft knows that it is not only not essential for a man to drink while discharging his public duties, but that it is detrimental. Mr. Taft has a clear head and he intends to keep it.

Daniel G. Taylor, Judge of the Circuit Court: My own view is that the personal habits of a public official, so far as they do not interfere with the proper performance of his duties, are his own business. However, it is commendable in a man who occupies a position such as the presidency to seek to set an example by adherence to self-control and abstinence.

James E. Withrow, Judge of the Circuit Court: It is commendable in a public official to refrain from drinking to excess or so as to conflict with the proper discharge of his duties. Taking other kinds of stimulants is just as bad. A public official's private habits, when he is not engaged in his duties, are of no concern to anyone else, unless he is incapacitated for his public duties as a result. A public official should so conduct himself as to prevent criticism, if possible.

Matthew G. Reynolds, Judge of the Circuit Court: Mr. Taft's action is wholesome. He may be compelled to serve wine at state dinners, but it will not be necessary for him to drink. A man's personal habits, where they do not make him offensive to himself or the public, are a matter of his own concern.

The legitimate PAID circulation of the Post-Dispatch in St. Louis and its suburbs is greater than that of all other English Dailies combined.

BRUNETTE WITH WINNING SMILE LOST IN FIRE

Policeman Sees Flame Destroy Her Marcel Wave and Classic Features.

OLIVE STREET TRAGEDY

Never Again Will the Amiable and Admired One Gladden the Eye.

That pretty brunette isn't there any more—the one with the marcel wave and the cute little rolls and puffs and curly-mecues and things.

Everyone that rode on the Olive cars knew her by sight, even if they weren't on speaking terms with her. She had the same sweet smile for everybody—not a flirtatious smile, either. She was much too ladylike for that. Here was the expression of joyousness which might well have come from the one thing about her that always excited comment—her hair.

Women fairly raved over the way her beautiful coiffure was "done up." Men were captivated.

She was always on the north side of Olive street, just east of Grand. There you would find her, rain or shine.

But she's gone.

Smiled Amid Flames.

Early Monday night, McCornack saw smoke coming from the front of the Metropolitan Building. When the wind would carry the dense cloud aside he could dimly see through it the face of a beautiful woman in one of the windows.

It was the handsome brunette. She did not scream. Though flames played behind her and the woodwork of the room was cracking and scorching.

Still that ever present smile was on her face.

McCornack turned in an alarm and ran to the burning building. The heat was so great that he could not approach near enough to rescue the brunette.

As he stood helplessly watching her a change came over her beautifully molded face. It was a melting expression, as though her courage had deserted her and she wanted to have a good cry.

Smile Comes Off at Last.

Her features softened and great tears ran down her cheeks. The corners of her smiling mouth began to droop.

Would the flames never come? McCornack turned to see if they were coming. When he looked back at the window again the brunette was gone.

"Heaven be praised, she has escaped," he said with a sigh of relief.

But she hadn't.

When the fire in Mrs. S. Singer's hair store at 353 Olive street had been extinguished all that was left of the brunette was found in the show window.

She was the handsomest dark dummy in town, too, and her loss is irreparable. About $100 worth of false hair was destroyed, but the hairdressing parlors adjoining the store were not damaged.

POLICE PROPOSE TO MAKE CLUBS GET LIQUOR LICENSE

Quo Warranto Proceedings Contemplated Against Bona Fide Social Organizations.

Quo warranto proceedings may be resorted to by the police department in its determination to stamp out lid clubs. Evidence gathered by policemen Sunday will be submitted to Circuit Attorney Sager, and he will be requested to apply for a legal order restraining clubs from dealing in liquor traffic without a dramshop license. The same course of action was taken by Assistant Attorney General John Kennish in his crusade against lid clubs in St. Louis County.

The Circuit Court will be asked to restrain clubs from selling liquors, on the ground that they are violating the liquor laws and the charters under which they are operating.

Circuit Attorney Sager declares he is in hearty accord with the intention of the police and that he will co-operate with the department to the extent that the power of his office will permit.

The clubs of the rich are to be included in the new crusade. One of the big organizations claiming to be bona fide will be named as a defendant in the proceedings. Which one to be named has not as yet been decided.

The Supreme Court in the case of former Excise Commissioner Nicholas Bell against the St. Louis Club declared that organization to be a bona fide one and not subject to the liquor laws of the State.

The police will proceed on the theory that clubs have no right to sell liquors without a liquor license.

CUBAN MILLIONAIRE IS SLAIN

HAVANA, Nov. 30.—Three Mess, a multimillionaire, and a member of the London Board of Directors of the United Railways of Havana was shot and killed on his estate at Aguado De Pinar, Matanzas Province, by Damon F. Victorio, a local merchant. It is supposed that the trouble was through a business quarrel.

Mess was a prominent sugar planter and the owner of much real estate in Havana. He was struck by five bullets. His slayer was arrested.

WANTED TO SHOOT FOOTBALL. REFUSED, THEY WOUND PLAYERS

Hunters Fire Into Crowd of Players and Victims Probably Will Die.

LATTIMER, Pa., Nov. 30.—Angered because their demand that the football be kicked into the air that they might shoot at it was refused, three hunters who appeared from the wood skirting the football field here Sunday afternoon, fired into the players of the local and Minersville teams, who were having a scrimmage.

Daniel Burke and Joseph Somers were so badly wounded that their recovery is doubtful.

After a chase by automobile, Jack Shriner and Charles and Joe Goodie, all of Hazelton, were arrested and held without bail.

EFFORT TO FLY AEROPLANE FROM WATER UNSUCCESSFUL

Pontoons Instead of Wheels or Running Gear Used as Starting Apparatus.

HAMMONDSPORT, N. Y., Nov. 30.—The aeroplane, "June Bug," of the Aerial Experiment Association, has been remodeled and fitted with two pontoons in place of the running gear or wheels heretofore used to make a start on land. The machine has been renamed the "Loon."

Yesterday afternoon the Loon was taken out on Lake Keuka and the experiment tried of making her rise from the water. There was a marked lifting effect, although not sufficient to cause her to rise into the air. Experiments along this line will be continued.

Not Ready to Die Yet.

Husband: You needn't worry about her, doctor. She got a new dress the other day and she hasn't tried it on yet.

"The Danger at the Gate"
A Little Sermon on Soap

Being chiefly pure Fat saponified, it is, however, a pure food for Bacteria, which sooner or later may enter it. So that merely "pure" Soap won't do. It must, in addition, be fortified against the Enemy—against Bacteria. Resinol Soap is just pure Soap, plus the ideal Fortifier, prescribed during more than twelve years by Physicians in the most obstinate Skin Diseases.

"Resinol," you know, is "the main reliance" in the treatment of Sores that won't heal, itchings that won't cease, and skin inflammations that won't disappear, under the usual prescriptions.

Resinol when applied to the Skin puts Pain, Irritation and Discomfort to Sleep, brings "Therapeutic Rest" to inflamed or itching parts, kills off Disease Germs instantly, and, under these favorable conditions, heals like magic.

Well—that Antiseptic, quick-healing element in Resinol Soap is what fortifies it against the accumulation of Bacteria, and against the transmission of Skin Diseases via the favorite route of the Soap Dish.

Its daily use automatically heals the unnoticed scratches, pimples, chafings, itchings, or slight abrasions of the skin, before "The Danger at the Gate" can enter them with virulent infection.

Use it for Toilet, Bath, Hair-washing, and, exclusively, for Baby. Its fragrance is delightful as that of fine old Russia Leather. It softens hard water, is bland, soothing, and leaves the Skin moist and supple. Your Druggist sells it. Resinol Chemical Co., Baltimore.

RESINOL SOAP

Now, "pure" Soap is only safe when remaining pure.

ENTANGLED WITH JAPAN.

What they call an "agreement" between the United States and Japan for the restriction of their own ambitions, for the regulation of their relations with each other, and for the protection of China is outlined at Washington, where it is said to be of "far-reaching importance."

Such it certainly is. It is not exactly a treaty of alliance like that existing between Great Britain and Japan, but it resembles that compact in its palpable motives and possibilities. If nothing except what appears on the surface in this agreement were contemplated by it, there would be no reason for such a paper. The United States and Japan do not need to proclaim their friendship, their benevolence toward China or their respect for each other's territorial rights. The fact that they do this formally and under some circumstances agree to "consult" as to future procedure opens up many prospects of mischief.

The British-Japanese alliance was received with much applause at Washington. It fitted in exactly with some of the enterprises of our spectacular expansionists and meddlers who wished to figure prominently in world politics. If this "agreement" has any meaning at all, it means a foreign entanglement contrary to our historical policy, and probably in servile imitation of the stupendous blunder of the British government in the same quarter.

The Senate of the United States, ignored thus far in these negotiations, should denounce them at the first opportunity.

A SUIT FOR A SPELLBINDER.

The Republican City Committee has scheduled as one item of the campaign expenses in St. Louis "One suit of clothes for J. Milton Turner." The suit cost $25 and the expenditure was regarded as necessary in order that Mr. Turner, who is a negro spellbinder, might make the proper impression when he appeared before an audience.

It would be a carping critic who would find fault with the $25 expended for raiment for Mr. Turner. How can a Republican orator talk prosperity satisfactorily unless he looks prosperous? Rags may be royal raiment when worn for virtue's sake, as the heroine of the melodrama was wont to proclaim, but rags would spoil the effect of any speech if worn by the man on the stake wagon or behind the ice-water pitcher at a Republican campaign meeting.

Let us hope that Mr. Turner got the worth of the committee's $25 in buying his suit, and that it will last him until another campaign is on.

THE POLICE RUMMAGE SALE.

The Police Department rummage sale of pistols, knives, brass "knucks" and other deadly weapons is a direct encouragement to the morbid to win distinction by using the unclean things in a criminal way.

Mr. Stewart put a stop to these sales when he was President of the Board, and it is not easy to understand why they have been resumed. It needs no great intelligence or experience to tell the police that only evil is brewed by hawking about such articles and putting them in the hands of the very people who are most likely to misuse them. The number of persons who will care to possess the weapons for their scientific or sociological interest is very small.

The best disposition to be made of these mementoes of crime is to drop them all into the river. They have served their evil turn already, many of them often. It is worse than foolish to start them on a fresh career.

HITCHCOCK'S LIST OF ELIGIBLES.

From the standpoint of practical politics, it is probably a good thing that Frank H. Hitchcock's selection as Postmaster General in the new Cabinet has been announced early. Mr. Hitchcock is chairman of the National Republican Committee, and as such he managed the recent campaign for Mr. Taft. To be placed at the head of the Postoffice Department has always been the ambition of managing politicians, for in that position there is more patronage than is to be found anywhere else in the public service.

No one can direct the affairs of a great party during a presidential campaign without making many acquaintances in all parts of the country and gaining an intimate knowledge of the tastes and ambitions of important party workers in the matter of officeholding. There is reason to believe, therefore, that as Postmaster General Mr. Hitchcock will find his celebrated card index system of much value. If it does not contain the names of deserving patriots in every congressional district, what was its object and how can its cost be defended?

Chairman Dickey of the Missouri Republican Committee, who is trying to collect enough money to cover the deficit in the party treasury, should close his books as soon as possible. Christmas is at hand and the demands of charity will be great.

Kaiser has been ordered by his physicians to a long rest. He is suffering from insomnia. If he follows the advice of his doctors, he will also sleep.

IS A TRUST PATRIOTIC?

Are we to understand the organs and agents of the Terminal Trust as holding that under all circumstances it is unprogressive and unpatriotic for inhabitants of St. Louis to question the motives of the monopoly or to oppose the demands that it makes upon the community?

Is it the meaning of these organs and agents that to resist the trust is to attack the best interests of the city; that to antagonize the extension of the trust's powers is to place one's self in open and notorious hostility to commercial enterprise, and that to propose competition in the matter of bridges and terminals is to be an outcast and a reprobate?

Is monopoly the only refuge? If monopoly be checked or removed, shall our terminals cease to exist and shall traffic languish? Is it conceivable that the future growth and prosperity of this great city depend wholly upon the operations of a toll-taking trust?

Furthermore, if it be proof of the highest intelligence and virtue to dream of and scheme for one great and growing system of monopolized terminals, how are we to assume that it is a high crime to favor new terminals, new bridges and new and greatly enlarged facilities calculated to break the power of the monopoly, a power exerted not for business, but for extortion?

The fact is that in this case, as in most others where privilege and monopoly exist, the purposes of monopoly as well as the purposes of those who oppose monopoly are misrepresented. Some men err unintentionally, but in many cases they are blind because of self interest or prejudice or subservience.

Those who oppose the Terminal Trust's new projects are hostile only to the monopoly features which they contain and which they intensify. The organs and agents of the Terminal Trust antagonize free bridges and new terminals because they see in these things a menace to monopoly. We shall have terminals. We shall continue to extend our trade, and we shall increase our wealth and prestige whether we nurse the trust or take measures to check its growth. The question involved is not one of life or death for anyone or anything—except the monopoly idea. That idea has been hateful to most of our people. So it should remain. The Post-Dispatch will not glid it with respectability and patriotism, for soon or late its falsity is certain to be revealed.

IBSEN AND HIS "EXPOUNDERS."

"Take Ibsen literally," said Mme. Nazimova to Marguerite Martyn of the Post-Dispatch, "and he is the simplest thing in the world, because he is the truth."

Similarly wrote the late Richard Mansfield to a member of the Post-Dispatch staff at the time of his presentation of "Peer Gynt" in St. Louis two seasons ago. "A white mind and a child's eyes are all that is necessary to a comprehension of Ibsen," he said, in effect. These interpreters of the Norwegian dramatist may fairly be credited with having at least an average appreciation of whatever difficulties might lie in the way of the Ibsen student.

They found practically no difficulties. Simplicity alone is demanded—a willingness to realize that true greatness is always simple and to be accepted simply. Yet what a worry and fuss the little two-by-four "commentators" make over this greatly simple man! It seems almost as if they strive to convince one of their own exceptional greatness by having it appear that they are the "elect" through whom alone the general world can reach Ibsenian understanding.

THIRTY VOTES OUT OF 700,000.

Attorney-General Hadley's opinion in the Graves case is important, not so much on account of the issue raised by Judge Graves as for what it has to say about legislative responsibility for the declaration of the result of the election for State officers. He states the law clearly and authoritatively. There is no reason to suppose that there will be any trickery or violence.

The indications are that the lieutenant-governorship will be decided by a few votes, perhaps less than 30 in a total poll of about 700,000. While excited partisans have done a good deal to confuse the public in regard to the facts in this case, it is probable that the Legislature in joint session will ascertain the true result quickly and declare it without special reference to its effect upon politics or politicians.

Men who have undertaken to thwart the will of the people of Missouri in the past have not profited much and we do not believe that there will be any new ventures in that line right away.

TOTAL ABSTINENCE IN THE COURTS.

"Do your work well and you may take a drink occasionally," is the pith of a decision of the Court of Appeals of New York. This decision may not please prohibitionists, but it has reason behind it.

A Brooklyn man contracted with a St. Paul publisher to write a lawbook at $2 a page, with the provision that if he abstained from drinking intoxicants while writing the book he was to receive $6 a page. He wrote the book, got his $3 and sued when the additional $4 a page was refused. He admitted that he had taken a few drinks while wrestling with the dry legal literature.

The learned Judge of the Court of Appeals held that the contract was "not to write books in order that the complainant may keep sober, but a contract to keep sober in order that he may write books."

This was to hold, in effect, that so long as a man does his work satisfactorily, his employer may not insist that he entirely avoid the demon rum or its substitutes.

The President-elect never was much of a drinker, but preparatory to the assumption of the greatest office in the world, he has decided to become a teetotaler. Without casting any reflection upon the temperance men, living and dead, who have been President, it may be said that no other chief magistrate since Rutherford B. Hayes has had a seat on the water wagon.

I can't tell just what the charge will be, but you can say that whenever there is a lid club raided the charge will stick—Chief of Police Creech.

How would it do to make the charge fit the offense? Most of these clubs are unlawful. If the police would make their accusations stick they should bring them within the scope and meaning of the law.

The aged mother of that Chicago murderer who is to be hanged in two weeks was a true mother. The day before she died of grief she wrote her son telling him she knew he was innocent. What a heaven this world would be if all men were as good as their mothers believe them to be!

Mr. Root thinks it would be a fine thing to have a secret agreement with Japan which would not be a real treaty because it would not have the approval of the Senate. What some presidents and secretaries of state appear to need is a real impeachment trial.

My heart aches for the poverty stricken being visited by the stork. If the poor would only all get wise and give the stork a rest what a blessing it would be.
A MRS. WISE.

Italian Achievements.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.
It seems almost the irony of fate that Italy, whose people are held so cheaply by the average American, should have come out first in three consecutive international sporting events, affirming in this way her supremacy over the entire world. Decadent? Not so you can notice it. We can easily afford to be called "dagos."

There Are Thousands of Good Widows.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.
I would like to suggest to the lonely widower who has mingled with the widows of St. Louis for 10 years and is still searching for one who has not any of the three faults he enumerates—"using cuss words, chewing gum or drinking"—that as a rule a man usually finds what he is looking for and if he really wishes to meet some of the temperate ones he should look in the right direction. I am personally acquainted with a widow who supports herself and two children and whose time is so fully occupied in the pursuit of the necessary "where-withal" shall we be clothed and fed? that she has no energy to waste in the useless cuss words or gum chewing, or time to waste in drinking, even if she had the inclination or appetite.
ONE WORKER.

The Food of the Mill.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.
In reply to Mrs. C. B. R. of Tuesday night, I wish to say that I heartily agree with her common-sense views on race suicide. If the people of today were more educated on this subject we would not see little children going to the factories and having the capitalists suck the blood from their little bodies for profit as they do today. As I am a Socialist, I believe it to be the duty of every citizen to work to raise a family, but I do not believe in having seven or eight children and then have to send them to slave for the capitalist masters, as most of them do today. It is far better to have one or two children and make a good man or woman of them than to have seven or eight and have to send them to work when they ought to be at school.
A SOCIALIST.

School Penmanship.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.
In your editorial today on "Penmanship in the Schools" you state: "Nearly all public school pupils who entered the contest have been taught the so-called 'vertical system,' while the church schools have adhered to the Spencerian method." This is not correct. Practically this same system is now in use in the public schools of this city. After hundreds of business men complained about vertical writing the late Mr. Goldman made an investigation. By the merest accident, as reported to me by a teacher of prominence in the public schools, the difficult matter of the penmanship of the poor writers in the public school entered a Catholic school to prepare for confirmation. Two years later she returned to her old school, and astonished her teacher and principal with her penmanship. The matter was reported to Mr. Seldan and in a short time hundreds of teachers, principals and supervisors began a systematic investigation. Mr. Collins was elated over the children being able to write and sing at the same time. Mr. Walker, the supervisor of writing in the Catholic schools, was made a flatterer of which he accepted, because the Catholic School Board could not equal it. He devised the Seldan method, which to all intents and purposes is the Palmer method. This latter, which may be termed a modernized Spencerian method, is also called the muscular movement because the muscles of the entire arm are used.
ONE WHO KNOWS.

The Clubs.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.
Abusing privileges menaces business. The race-horse people enjoy the privilege of racing three months in the year at the old Fair Grounds, but not being satisfied with that, they built the Delmar Racetrack so they could get three months more racing in the year. For abusing their privilege the race-horse element was put out of business altogether. Not by law, but by indulgence, the saloon element exercised the privilege of doing a quiet back-door business on Sundays, but by degree the saloon keeper became more aggressive until a certain element got bold enough to throw front doors open on Sunday in defiance of law and as a compensation for a privilege abused the Sunday lid went on.

As a matter of course, since the lid went on, a number of fungus clubs have sprung up all over the city, where, it is said, the saloon man puts his goods in for disposition on Sunday under another name. No man has a moral right to get drunk, but if "Mr. Banker" goes to the "St. Louis Club" and gets drunk he deserves no censure, but whether he gets drunk or not, if the money he spends there for drink lessons the comforts of these dependent upon him, he merits severe punishment. What right have "thousands of workmen and mechanics" to leave their families in "crowded, cold and uncomfortable rooms" and to enter and enjoy themselves in the clubs that are under the lid? Spending money in clubs that are the cause of the misery of women and children being cooped up in crowded, cold and uncomfortable rooms. The man who can take a drink and quit seldom causes any trouble for the saloon, the clubman or his own family, but that weak character, vacillating mind, such or poor, who has not the moral force, the decision of character, the backbone, the manhood to stop before he gets too much is a constant menace to the saloon or club man's interest, a disgrace to his family and friends and an imposition on the social and business affairs of men. Now why are the authorities trying to suppress these clubs? Have they abused a privilege? If so, relieve them with horse-racing and the Sunday opening.

CHRISTMAS SHOPPING.

A great many earnest and commendable appeals are made to us at this season to do our Christmas shopping early. We are assured that we can spare the clerk a great deal of fatigue, and that while the stocks are new and big is the time to get the best values.

We know these things are true. We don't want to work the clerk to death. We don't care about buying what is left and pulled over. Nevertheless, the most of us will not do our Christmas shopping until the eleventh hour. Such is the nature of man. Hope restrains him against his natural tendencies to be humane and withal selfish. Hope bids him wait, and he does wait, hoping he will have more money than when he has now.

That is the whole psychology of the late Christmas shopping. If we could be sensible and realize that we will not have any more money in three weeks than we have today, it would be a very simple matter to buy early, conceal long and give the clerks Christmas Eve off.

ANTHROPOLOGY.

Color blind women buy every shade of hair but their own.

Sum boys go through college, and others just go through a college allowance.

It isn't human nature to be very thick with a man who knows how much you're making.

Sum people is so pore they can't get married, and others is so rich they can't stay married.

Another good point that football has over baseball is that when you want to kick you can kick the ball.

BONGOS AND KUDOS.

The announcement that Mr. Roosevelt's hunting license will permit him to kill two kudoes and one bongo will unfortunately increase the anxiety of his more timid countrymen.

As long as he confined his designs to lions, gorillas, elephants and the other creatures made familiar to us by the circus, popular apprehension did little harm. But it is very different when he extends his deadly intentions to those more obscure animals which no one has ever succeeded in hearing of, to say nothing of seeing caged. Aside from the additional alarm occasioned by the knowledge that he is to add the haunts of these beasts to his war map, we know him well enough to guess that when he has slain two kudoes and one bongo he will go right on down the line after the wampus, the man-eating wuxxywalla and the saber-toothed odontopippus.

The prospect that he will return alive seems diminished by every fresh detail.

LETTER TO SANTA CLAUS.

(There are only a few rifles in the country, and if an army of 200,000 men could land, the Americans would have nothing to fight it with but pitchforks and shotguns.—Mr. Roosevelt as quoted by Henry Reuterdahl.)

DEAR Santa Claus: I set me down
And take my pen in hand
To tell you what we really need
In this imperiled land—
Not drums and skates and Teddy Bears,
And all those little trifles—
But what we need, dear Santa Claus,
Is rifles.

PLEASE give us rifles, Santa Claus,
For every man and boy,
That we may learn to march and shoot,
To charge and to deploy—
That we may fit ourselves for war
And answer all alarms—
O, what we need, dear Santa Claus,
Is arms.

DEAR Santa Claus—There's father, now,
Who should be picking up
In marksmanship, but always gets
His little mustache up—
The whip is not the worst of things
To whip the Japs or Huns—
O, Santa Claus, our greater need
Is guns.

THERE'S Johnny, too, who gets a horn
As sure as Christmas comes,
And marches up and down the street
While some companion drums—
But rooky-toots and rub-a-dubs
Make very poor gendarmes—
O, what we want, dear Santa Claus,
Is arms.

Congressmen inclined to connive at the defeat of Speaker Cannon have a very dull sense of their duty to the glory of nations.

Perhaps Mr. Roosevelt's African hunt will at least serve to unite us upon either hippopotami or hippotamus.

American Soldiers of Fortune.

A Series of Important Biographies Written for the Post-Dispatch

By ALBERT PAYSON TERHUNE.

NO. 8—SIR WALTER RALEIGH.

A YOUNG ENGLISHMAN—courtier, dandy, soldier of fortune—received from Queen Elizabeth in 1584 a decidedly remarkable charter that empowered him to seize and colonize "any remote, heathen and barbarous land not actually possessed by any Christian prince or people."

As North America was the most "remote, heathen and barbarous land" within his reach, the holder of the charter—Master Walter Raleigh—turned his attention to colonizing a part unknown of that country.

Raleigh was a strange man. Fearless in fight, he was yet a flattering, time-serving courtier. A lover of riches and splendor, he could nevertheless endure privations and live on a crust. Selfish and ambitious, he still yearned to form colonies in far lands for the future glory of England. Fighting, flattering, scheming, he managed at length to win Queen Elizabeth's notice. It is said he first attracted her attention by spreading his velvet cloak across a marshy spot in the path before her, and by afterward begging leave to wear forever the muddy cloak that had been hallowed by the touch of her royal foot.

Raleigh was unlike most of the Queen's favorites. He did not care to stay at court to gather what crumbs of patronage he could. Instead, he begged leave to form colonies in America. Up to that time nearly every one who had gone to the New World was a seeker for gold or fame. Raleigh was the first adventurer who sought to plant permanent colonies in what is now the United States. Two of his ships went early in 1585 to America, cruising along the Atlantic coast and bringing back Raleigh's first settlers. Raleigh was made a knight in reward for giving England the new territory. For America was "no man's land." Whosoever could find unclaimed shores was free to seize them in his government's name.

Raleigh fitted out a new expedition of seven ships, which started for Virginia in 1585. A colony was established at Roanoke Island—the first to be founded between Canada and Cuba. But the settlers grew discouraged because they could not pick up gold everywhere, and because they must hack homes out of trackless forests. They were not the sort of men to brave the perils of a hostile wilderness. So they went back to England the next year. A second colony was fitted out and sent to Chesapeake Bay. This settlement seemed likely to be permanent. But when Raleigh went back to look for the colonists some time later they had vanished. The Indians had swept down upon them, burned their houses and massacred men, women and children alike. Raleigh, in face of these repeated failures to colonize Virginia, wrote bravely to a friend: "I shall yet live to see it an English nation."

But for the time he could do nothing further in behalf of his pet scheme. He had already spent more than $200,000 of his own fortune in his efforts to give England a lasting settlement in the New World. Ill-luck had dogged every step of his enterprise. He had pointed out a road that was to be followed in a few years by more fortunate men. The Virginia colony was in future to make itself a mighty factor in the growth of the new nation. But Raleigh himself was not to know the joy of founding this permanent home. The chief immediate results of Raleigh's efforts in America were the introduction of tobacco and potatoes into Europe. Raleigh, while in the New World, had learned from the Indians the art of smoking. His servants once, seeing him puffing away at a long pipe, used a bucket of water over him, thinking Sir Walter was on fire. The smoking habit gained an instant hold over the English. One chronicler of the time speaks of tobacco as "that most bewitching vegetable." Queen Elizabeth herself smoked so much that her teeth were blackened by nicotine.

Raleigh brought to England from Virginia the first potatoes ever seen in Europe. These he planted in a field on his Irish estate. It was Ireland's earliest potato crop. Tobacco—potatoes—these were the only visible fruits of a series of disastrous voyages that had cost many lives and $200,000 in money! But Raleigh was not yet done with the Western Hemisphere. After joining in England's wars against Spain and leading an exploring party up the Orinoco River he gradually lost favor with Elizabeth. The Queen died in 1603. Her successor, James I, had Raleigh thrown into prison on a charge of treason. There, the explorer languished for 15 years. At the end of that time he succeeded in persuading King James to release him.

Raleigh went to the Orinoco. There, while he was ill in bed, a party of his men (with or without his consent) attacked a Spanish town, killing many of its inhabitants. In the fight Raleigh's young son lost his life. The gold mine could not be found. The sailors mutinied, the voyage was a total failure and Raleigh was obliged to go back in disgrace to England. There he was imprisoned for the attack on the Spanish town. The old treason charge against him was revived, and, in October, 1618, he was beheaded.

BANISH TURKISH CORNERS

Dust Catchers Spread Disease, Says This Writer for the Post-Dispatch.

By MARGARET HUBBARD AYER

IF women only realized how irritating to the health, hair, complexion and lungs dust is, they would banish from their homes the baleful Turkish corners, hangings and draperies—dust collectors and germ breeders.

Even carpets, unless kept in the old-fashioned, housewifely way, are unhealthy. It is better to have bare floors, with rugs that may be rolled up and beaten out of doors once a week. But it is the so-called "Turkish corner" that does the worst for those who already have weak throats and lungs. This catagory of draperies that inundates the little flat parlors or the ends of boarding house drawing rooms is a veritable menace to health.

Into the creases of the permanent canopy and the numerous Bagdads which line its sides creeps the fine dust that no dust cloth or brush can possibly remove. It settles on the cross-arms and daggers which threaten to tumble on the unsuspecting heads of the loungers within the walls of the Turkish corner, and penetrates the numerous embroidered pillows which ornament the seat of this infested place. Moreover, the Turkish corner is generally dark. The sun's rays rarely get into its shady depths, and, lastly but not the least at all, the Turkish corner is not a thing of beauty. Remove it from your parlor and put in its stead a big, roomy davenport, a comfortable divan or just a sofa and the room will suddenly seem relieved of a great burden, to have recovered after an illness. But it is its health and not its beauty we had intended to discuss.

No room can be healthy where dust is allowed to accumulate, and therefore dust-collecting articles should either be banished from it or should be so arranged as to be thoroughly brushed and beaten once a week on cleaning day. Portieres are, of course, a necessity in most parlors, especially apartment parlors, where two rooms generally have to be divided by heavy curtains. But sleeping rooms should have no hangings beyond the usual muslin curtains. It is better not to have carpets in sleeping rooms.

One or two rugs on a bare polished floor are more hygienic and really prettier. Do not have too many pictures in this room sacred to rest and thought. They also are dust collectors and they are distracting to a mind that shuts itself in here to hide from distraction. Have only the pictures that are most highly prized and let this chamber be as empty and fresh as space and air will make it.

The Earliest Punctuation.

PUNCTUATION by means of dots and points, so as to indicate the meaning of sentences and assist the reader to a proper enunciation, is ascribed originally to Aristophanes, a grammarian of Alexandria, Egypt, who lived in the third century, B. C. Whatever his system may have been, it was subsequently neglected and forgotten, but was reintroduced by Charlemagne, the various stops and symbols being designed by Wernfried and Alcuin.

A WOMAN'S CHRISTMAS.

Money Did Not Affect Her Nor the Lack of it Quenched Her Spirit.

HARD times have nothing to do with Christmas. Money or lack of money has nothing to do with Christmas, says Appleton's. A poor missionary on our Western frontier once told his wife it would be out of the question for them to celebrate the approaching Christmas. Two installments of his pathetic salary were long overdue. He had just received a letter from the secretary of the society, warning him that he might have to wait a long time for his money. The society was "financially embarrassed." The missionary had six small children. The embarrassment was mutual.

His wife said nothing. She did not agree. She cut a Christmas tree in the wood lot back of the house. That was simple. She melted her own large candles and made small ones. She whittled pieces of wood into wooden dolls. These she painted and dressed up with odds and ends of cloth. She got the little missionary surreptitiously to construct some bows and arrows for the small boys. Thirty-five cents judiciously expended on luxuries at the general store, five miles distant, completed the Christmas preparations. There was plenty of "nonsense" in that family on Christmas. When the joys of the day somewhat subsided, one of the small boys, after an inquiring manner of small boys, asked his mother: "Why did we have a better time this Christmas than ever before?" She answered: "Perhaps because we didn't have any money to buy a good time, so we had to make it." After the children had gone to bed, she and her husband discussed their success in twanging fate. She was tired. She remembered a Christmas night on which she had been much more tired. She had been companion to the rich old lady who had helped the missionary with his ministerial education. Weeks before Christmas she and the secretary had worked late into the nights on the Christmas list. A majority of the names were those of other rich old ladies. The "poor" had, of course, to be remembered. They were indicated by their addresses. Their individual names were superfluous. "The poor's" presents were all alike. They were bought in bulk at a discount. The rich old ladies were more difficult to handle. They had individual names and must have individual presents. The matter of price was critical. The cost must be kept down to the lowest possible point. Still no rich old lady must receive a present obviously less expensive than the one she would presumably send in retaliation. To throw light on this point, the presents which the rich old ladies had sent in former years were hunted up and appraised. Then came the shopping—buying this immense number of presents. Then, the dreary days of wrapping and marking them. Then, the long days of delivering them with carriage, coachman and footman.

When Christmas came she was exhausted. She had to spend the day in bed. To the old lady, it was inexplicable that her companion should stay in her room instead of attending the state merrymaking of the gathered clans. The recounting of this other Christmas greatly cheered the little missionary. He had him feel more philosophical, less apologetic about his minute and precarious salary. The old lady had bought her Christmas just as she had bought everything else. She would not have understood you if you had told her Christmas was not for sale.

PRINCE PAINTER, A NOVELIST.

Amelie Rives' Husband and His Many Interesting Accomplishments.

PRINCE PIERRE TROUBETSKOY, who married Amelie Rives after her divorce from Chanler, has written a novel, "The Fasser-By." He is a painter of considerable merit. Strange as it may appear he is rich. Why he lives in Virginia because his wife does not like to live abroad.

He was born in Italy in 1864, of a Russian father and an American mother. Neither parent understood the other's mother tongue, so Troubetzkoy in early youth learned the different languages with which his parents chose to communicate with each other. From earliest boyhood he spoke French, German and Italian with equal fluency.

There were three brothers born of this international marriage. They were always intent on drawing, modeling, sculpturing, etc., when they were still children. At 5 years of age Troubetzkoy painted an oil portrait of himself, which was sent to the Accademia di Brera, a gallery in Milan, where it was accepted.

At the age of 16 he went to London incognito, because he desired to see what he could accomplish by going on his own merits and without the facilitous aid of lineage and social introductions. The natural conclusion was that he was ultimately won out. His first considerable success was due to an article in Blackwood's Magazine which called attention to Troubetzkoy's oil painting of Gladstone, of which the critic thought so much that he compared it with that of Millais. Troubetzkoy had painted this portrait during Gladstone's famous debate on Home Rule, and the sittings were frenzied and brief, being snatched from luncheons and similar frivolous engagements. The critical article brought him recognition in London.

Troubetzkoy met Amelie Rives, the novelist, in England and came over to America to marry her. It was his intention to return at once to London and continue his career, but his wife's ill-health and her love for Virginia brought it about that he settled in America. He now leads more the life of a Southern gentleman than the life of a foreign nobleman.

Troubetzkoy spent three winters in Washington, during which time he painted portraits of Justice Harlan, Mrs. Stillson-Hutchins, Senator Foraker's son, Mr. Richardson, and Countess Cassini.

He stands something over six feet two inches, and is well proportioned. His ruddy skin shows the effect of an outdoor life. When in Italy, where he goes for holiday each year and to study a bit, he devotes most of his time to sailing. He is for the most part a vegetarian.

MEN'S FASHIONS

From Fairchild's Magazine.

A GREAT many men are wearing full dress coats this winter. The opening is a modified U and they button with either three, four or in some instances, five buttons. These buttons are very elaborate and are made of moonstones or mother of pearl and real pearls. Others are made of mother of pearl with diamonds set in the midst of them and some gold buttons are seen. For the most part these satin waistcoats are made without collars. Some have collar and the edges of the garment faced with serpentine silk braids.

THE silk scarf which has taken the place of the muffler for evening wear now comes not only in white and black designs but also in colors. One shop is showing these scarfs made of orange silk, while another is showing various patterns in gray silk. THE tabs of the wing collars seem to be growing smaller and smaller as the season progresses and these "foreign" collars are being worn with the most enormous scarfs by very exclusive garbed men. These collars, however, are to be found, as yet, only in the most high priced shops, as the models are thought by many to be little more than a "fad" and not likely to be adopted by the majority of men.

A NEW brown chevot overcoat is made with a dark brown velvet collar and has cuffs of the same material.

PALE tan suede gloves for formal day wear have heavy brown stitching, but the gloves with the stitching of a self color are more generally worn. FOR the past month a steamer rug has been one of the most necessary of man's possessions. Rugs have been very much in evidence at the football games and are always worn while as there are many uses to which they may be put, both indoors and out.

Ivory Soap appeals to rich and poor alike.

The millionaire's wife buys it because she knows there is nothing better at any price; the mechanic's wife, because she knows there is nothing so good at the same price.

In both cases, Good Value counts.

There is no "free" alkali in Ivory Soap. That is why it will not injure the finest fabric or the most delicate skin.

RECREATION ON SUNDAY.

A Plea for Abolition of Blue Laws, Written in Outing

By CASPER WHITNEY.

IN the Puritan days of this adolescent America, under the law of our forbearers if intolerant forefathers, a man was forbidden to kiss his wife on Sunday. No longer ago than a dozen years the museums of metropolitan New York were shut on the seventh day of the week to the public, of whom perhaps 99 per cent have no other day than this one for recreation.

Last winter, during the howling fury of one of those indiscriminate "reform" spasms which every now and again assail us, and the refined and uplifting Sunday night popular concerts at the opera houses were catalogued with the song-and-dance vaudeville shows as "wicked"—and closed forthwith.

Often the plaint falls from the pulpit upon the heads of the congregation that people are staying away from church in increasing numbers. Is there not, I ponder, some explanatory light shed upon the subject by the fanatics who howl against innocent recreation, and seem mad with the thought that everyone having joy in his heart is destined for hell?

Is not such bigotry and ignorance a handicap to the church it seeks to serve? Certainly it is no help to happy, wholesome existence. With these sad-eyed exhorters it is always to prohibit rather than to regulate; to destroy rather than to mend; to expel rather than to suppress. Obviously the eyes are closed in the helplessness of wholesome exercise, merely because it runs counter to preconceived notions. Apparently the obsession of their own dogmas is so enfeebling they dare not venture from under the eaves of the Puritan meeting house.

I sometimes wonder what these frenzied advocates of Sunday blue laws would have our people do on this day—or what sin they find in pursuits that bring health and happiness. To walk, to drive, to indulge in harmless and clean recreation; to visit the museums—in what manner more wholesome, more beneficial, can the workers of the world occupy themselves on Sunday? Here is where the Roman Church reveals its common sense and its cleverness, for not only do its priests tolerate harmless Sunday diversion, but they encourage their people to it after attendance at church in the morning.

I confess I always suspect the man who rails from the pulpit against innocent diversion as indulging in a desperate resort to arouse the congregation from a lethargy in which perhaps his commonplace dissertations have enervated him. I have never heard a minister of ability and force misceaneous as helpful guidance to Christian living the harangue against harmless Sunday play or recreation.

Oh, my friends of the narrow view, let the sunlight come in; let it search your hearts and put joy and laughter there; look up and see the blue sky. Why should not you, why should not all of us, enjoy the best that God gives us on Sunday? Is not your spirit uplifted the more by walking, or driving, or playing in the open—along the roads, over the green fields and hills, under the glorious sky? If there is anywhere that man's thoughts may be bettered and purified, surely it is in the open, enjoying the glories of Nature which have been created for his benefit.

A Wrestling Princess

THE Crown Princess of Montenegro is the champion royal lady wrestler of all Europe. Before her marriage to the future ruler of the little principality, the Princess Danilo was the Duchess Jutta of Mecklenburg, Germany. She is a brilliant pianist, an expert needlewoman, and a caricaturist of no little skill, but her most favorite activity seems to be the masculine sport of wrestling. She has specially studied the Japanese art of Jui Jitsu, and so thoroughly mastered it that she is almost invariably successful in the bouts in which she engages.

Milk-white floors—spotless and wholesome enough to "eat off"—is the quick result when GOLD DUST is added to your scrubbing water

Floors and doors and woodwork are hard to clean thoroughly because the dirt gets ground into every crack and crevice.

Soap and mop all you will, the job at best will be only partly done.

A heaping tablespoonful of GOLD DUST added to your scrubbing water will make it search out dirt, grease, germs and impurities from every cranny, and cleanse and purify wherever it touches.

GOLD DUST also relieves you of that weary, torturing grind of bending and scrubbing, because it does all the hard part of the work without your help. Soap makes housework hard work. Let GOLD DUST ease the burden.

COCHEMS' STAR, DISGRUNTLED, MAY NOT PLAY

Acker Threatens to Quit St. Louis U. if Not Elected to Team Captaincy.

There is a strong possibility that unless Frank Acker is elected captain of the St. Louis University football eleven at the annual banquet of the team, to be held the latter part of this week, that he will not return to school next year.

Acker states that he has been treated unfairly. Because of an injury to his knee he thinks he was treated unfairly in being accused of not playing in games which many thought he could have played in. That Acker could not have played was demonstrated in the Thanksgiving contest, when he was practically a one-legged man. It was plain then that he could not get up his speed and could not turn and dodge as formerly.

Last week talk was started that Harry Sullivan would be elected captain of the St. Louis U. team. It was generally thought that Acker would be the choice for captain for the reason that next season will be his last in football, he having played three years on the varsity. Acker twice declined to run for the captaincy this year because he wanted to be elected next season, as was the case with Walter Eckersall and other great players.

When asked if he would return to the University next year, Acker stated that he did not know whether he would or not.

If Acker is absent from the team it will be badly crippled. He is without a doubt one of the strongest men in advancing the ball in the West. In fact, in the Thanksgiving game he showed his merit when he knocked off four Indian tacklers, one after the other, when they tried to reach him on the side on which he had his good leg. When the red men tackled him on the injured side the least hard knock brought him down.

Acker had been counting on getting several strong players to enter the University next year. In case he does not come back the coach of the St. Louis U. team next season will have a hard time developing a man to take his place. According to Dr. D. C. Todd, who has been attending Acker, his knee will not give him a bit of trouble after three months' rest, which makes it certain that he will next season be able to play as strong a game as ever.

STAR BOWLERS GIVEN A REST

Pick of the Tenpin Experts Will Not Compete in Tourney Until Dec. 12.

The strong bowlers from whom some high scores may be expected are not scheduled to roll their games in the City Tenpin Association handicap tournament on the DeSoto alleys until after Dec. 12.

St. Louis Tenpin League bowlers have recorded the high scores of the year but against new pins and on new alleys it is doubtful if the teams will be able to do as well as the City Tenpin League fives, who will bowl later. The St. Louis Tenpin men will start bowling Friday evening.

The competition opened last night with two squads of five men, teams, all of whom were allowed liberal handicaps. The Prides, of the Packers League, with the liberal allowance of 183 pins, defeated the other team by a score of 233 pins, which will be a hard mark to beat. The next best total was registered by the Supremes, of the Packers League also, who got 279 pins, including a 233 pin handicap per game.

For the first time Adams was the only man who was really bowling a strong game. He got a total of 535 with a high game of 138.

This evening eight doubles will start bowling at 7:30 p. m., to be followed by another eight squad of doubles an hour later. Two squads of individuals, eight in each, will get a chance on the alleys to be followed by two more squads of individuals. All of these bowlers will be from teams of the Packers and Commercial Leagues.

Because of the fact that but eight alleys are being used for the tournament and the teams bowl only in the evenings, the competition will not be finished until Sunday, Dec. 30. In former years the teams bowled every day and in that way the tournament was completed in a short time. A big crowd witnessed the work of the men last night and a big attendance is expected all through the tournament as the stronger bowlers will compete as the tournament proceeds.

HENNESSEY NOT ELIGIBLE TO BOX AT MISSOURI A. C.

Francis Hennessey, who was scheduled to oppose Bobby Gresham in the boxing bouts at the Missouri A. C. Saturday night, is a professional, and that is the real reason for Hennessey's failure to go on. The club officials were probably told that the W. A. C. U. might become interested. Hennessey appeared in a preliminary bout at Granite City when Harry Trendall knocked out Jack Shelton some time ago. He is also said to have appeared in other unsanctioned bouts.

Barney McCarthy is likewise a professional fighter and cannot appear in any more amateur contests. The Hibernian fought "Kid" Silverberg at St. Louis, and only recently won a professional fight at Cairo, Ill.

The class of the men appearing in the amateur bouts at present is not nearly as strong as a year ago. Marshall Eaton was really the only man who showed skill with the gloves at the M. A. C. Saturday night, and Eaton has been boxing for three years or more.

Barney McCarthy's wrestling show at the main hall yesterday afternoon resulted in some good contests. Al Wassef defeated Frank Ream, Wassef the first fall in 1 hour and 15 minutes. In the second bout Ream retained, claiming that he was unfairly. Jimmy Kereas, Brooks and Billy Huber, and Ott Schaefer and

ST. LEO'S ELEVEN AT LAST BEATEN

Star Soccer Team Succumbs to St. Teresa's After Unusual Struggle.

In spite of the rain and sloppy fields only one soccer football organization called off its games scheduled for yesterday afternoon, the Kulaga Park League deciding that the teams could not play their best ball under the unfavorable weather conditions.

Probably the game that caused the most comment was that in which the St. Leo's lost to the St. Teresa's Athletic Park, 8 to 7. This is the largest score recorded in a soccer game in St. Louis in recent years. It is also the first time that the St. Leo's have been defeated in two years. A number of the regular players of the St. Leo's eleven were in Coal City, Ill., competing against the Coal City team.

The St. Teresa's, after the finish of the first half, seemed hopelessly beaten, the score at the end of 30 minutes of play standing 7 to 3 in favor of the St. Leo's. The St. Teresa's rallied in the second half, while the St. Leo's seemed to lose all of their teamwork. As a result it was only a short time until the score was tied and then Jimmy Rorand, by a pretty piece of dribbling, shot the ball through the St. Leo's goal for what proved to be the winning score of the contest.

The second game was a well-played contest, the Thistles and West Ends tying, 1-1. The Thistles scored in the first half, but the West Ends managed to get the leather through the Thistles' goal in the second half, making the game an even affair, as neither team was able to score afterwards. The results of the different league games played yesterday follow:

Athletic Park League—St. Teresa's, 8; St. Leo's, 7; Thistles, 1; West Ends, 1. C. B. C. League—C. B. C., 1; Holy Rosary, 1; St. Mary and Joseph, 2; Hibernians, 1. C. B. C. Junior League—St. Teresa's, 2; St. Leo's, 1; C. B. C. Juniors, 6; St. Mathews, 2; St. Marks, 2; Rocks, 1. South Side League—St. Agnes, 4; Fallstaffs, 1; Duwells, 1; Columbian A. C., 0. Zimmerman's Park League—Good Counsel, 1; Holy Ghost, 1; St. Augustine, 2; St. Leo's, 0.

CAPRON AND RYLE IN CUE MATCH AT KANSAS CITY

Joseph W. Capron of Ontario, who has been playing billiards in St. Louis for the past three years, will inaugurate a week of exhibition matches in Kansas City this evening with William Ryle, the best billiard player in that city. Capron and Ryle will play three cushion billiards and pool. Capron received quite a good offer to make the trip. He will return to St. Louis when the week's contract is fulfilled. Ryle recently met Calvin Demarest, but lost.

John Horgan of the Rex billiard hall is figuring on bringing Calvin Demarest to St. Louis in the near future for an exhibition match with one of the trio of strong billiard players now in this city, Cline, Cutler and Peterson. It is stated that the world's champion amateur billiard player has now turned professional. He has refused to accept the challenge issued by Al Taylor for a match to take place in Chicago.

While Tommy Hueston is resting on his laurels Alfredo De Oro is said to be earning a roll playing exhibition three cushion billiard and pool matches in the east. Hueston holds both the three cushion championship and pool championship emblems, but he has not yet won either.

LONGBOAT WILL OPPOSE DORANDO IN DISTANCE RUN

Indian Will Be Given Chance to Show Mettle Against Victorious Italian.

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—Tom Longboat, the famous Canadian Indian runner, who has shown wonderful speed and endurance in Marathon races, has been matched to run the Marathon distance—26 miles 38 yards—against Dorando Pietri at Madison Square Garden, Dec. 15. He will begin training for that event today unless he succeeds in his quest to have the race postponed.

"While Longboat is in good condition he is not in shape to fill such an engagement," said his manager, O'Rourke, "and I would like to have an extension of time in order to have him at his best. He is physically able to race a shorter distance right now, but he is not ready to go the long route, and it would not be wise to hurry his preparation. He needs a long course of training to perfect him, and for that reason I shall ask to have the date of the race changed to give him more time to train."

Dorando a Worthwhile Foe. "Longboat realizes the importance of this race. Dorando has proved that he is a foe worthy of Longboat's mettle, but I believe that the Indian is the greatest runner in the world." During Longboat's running career he has won many notable victories. In the Boston Marathon race of 1907 he defeated Johnny Hayes and many others in the fastest time ever made over the course. Previous to that he had established his reputation by winning two Marathon races in Canada. Hayes was so impressed with Longboat's quality that when he sailed for England he took part in the Olympic Marathon, he said that the Indian was his most dangerous opponent, and that he would win if he could beat him.

OLYMPIC WINNERS WILL COMPETE IN A. A. U. MEET

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—The athletic carnival of the Amateur Athletic Union will be held at Madison Square Garden tonight and Tuesday night. Among the entrants are included many world, American and Olympic record holders. Two events stand out prominently above all others, the two-mile and the five-mile runs. There have been strong fields seen in these, and in other long-distance events in New York, but never, it is said, has there been an instance in which the issue has been in the doubt as in these races, in which Bellars, Elsie, Driscoll, Bonhag, Lee, Collins, Bailey and Cohn will compete.

CROSS-COUNTRY MEN FIGHT CRAMPS WITH BRANDY FLASK

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 30.—Prospects for a good Yale track team this year have received their first severe blow in the loss of "Randy" Reynolds, the distance runner, and son of Prof. Reynolds of the Law School. Reynolds has been one of Yale's two-milers, but on account of his health he has had to give up running.

Several members of the cross-country team have been suffering from cramps lately, owing to the long runs in the cold. They are not allowed to take brandy or other stimulants, and after going several miles, breathing in the cold air, the cramps come and lay them up for some time.

A movement has been started by some of the men to carry a small flask, as the Cornell runners do, but so far this has been unsuccessful. It was due to cramps that Viles did not show up better in the meet with Harvard.

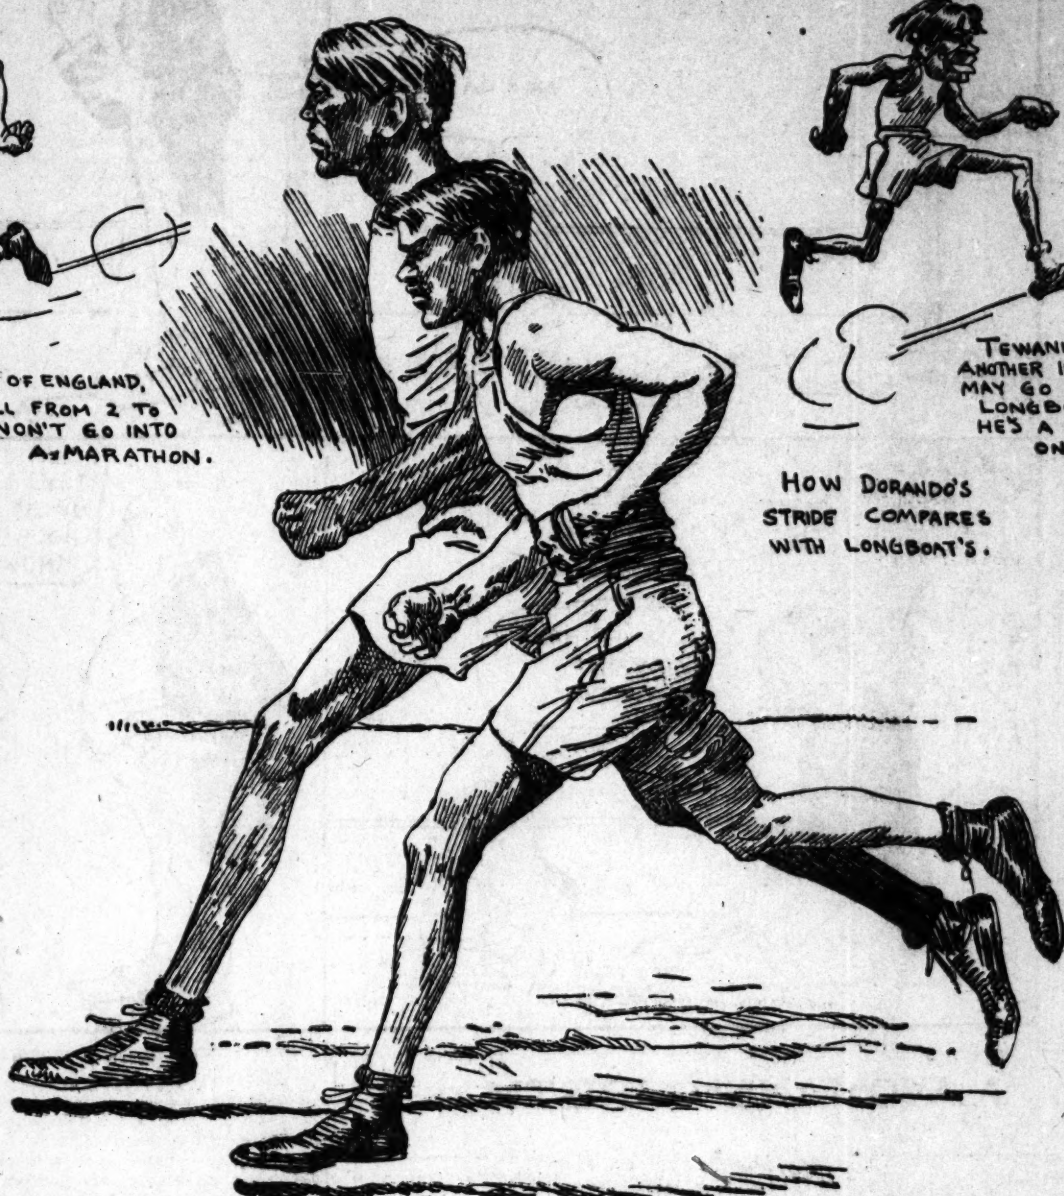

JONES CENSURED FOR COACHING NAVY TEAM

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 30.—There is considerable dissatisfaction because Jones, who coached this year's football eleven, went and coached the Navy quarterbacks a few days before the Army game. Members of the university have not yet ceased to criticize Head Coach Roper of Princeton for coaching Harvard a year ago, after seeing Yale play, and do not think that Jones ought to have gone to Annapolis after seeing the Army-Yale game. Jones probably went to Annapolis thoughtlessly and has been invited by his old friend,

Driscoll and Griffin Will Battle Again on Dec. 8

BY JOHN FOLLOWS. NEW YORK, Nov. 30.

AN IMPORTANT bout between little fellows was arranged last night. Jim Driscoll, the legitimate featherweight champion of England, and Charley Griffin, the Australian featherweight champion, will come together in a 15-round battle at the Armory A. C. of Boston on Tuesday evening, Dec. 8. Griffin will leave for Boston today to get in shape for the contest. In their previous contest at the National Sporting Club of London several months ago Griffin was disqualified on a foul in the fifteenth round.

Two big heavyweights will exchange wallop in a six-round bout at the West End A. C. of West-Philadelphia tonight. The scrap should be a hummer as both men are rapid fighters. Al Kulbak, the Michigan heavyweight, and Jim Stewart, a local pugilist, will be the principal. Kulbak has been fighting in great form in the Quaker City for some time. Boston today to get in shape for the contest. In their previous contest at the National Sporting Club of London he ever did before if he expects to beat his man.

EXPERT HOGAN SELECTS AN ALL-AMERICA TEAM

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—James J. Hogan, the Post-Dispatch expert, who has been reporting the football games at the Eastern colleges, has selected an All-America team as follows:

First.	Positions.	Second.
Draper, Pennsylvania.	Left tackle	Hoar, Syracuse.
Andrus, Yale.	Left guard	Waller, Princeton.
Nourse, Harvard.	Center	Singhuff, Navy.
Hoar, Harvard.	Right guard	Gobel, Yale.
Fish, Harvard.	Right tackle	O'Rourke, Cornell.
Scarlett, Pennsylvania.	Right end	Relfander, Navy.
Miller, Pennsylvania.	Quarterback	Banks, Syracuse.
Hollenbach, Pennsylvania.	Left halfback	Corbett, Harvard.
Tibbott, Princeton.	Right halfback	Marks, Dartmouth.
Coy, Yale.	Full back	Walden, Cornell.

Harvard, with the best line of the year, has three linemen on the first team. Pennsylvania, with its wonderful back field, contributes two backs and two linemen. Yale has its great individual player, Coy, and a guard, while Princeton is represented by its one great player, Dartmouth contributes an end.

WRAY'S COLUMN.

FORM, the hide-bound, absolute, positive sort that once enabled experts to accurately classify men and teams in competitive events, seems to have lost much of its certainty of recent years. The line between first-class and second-class performers no longer seems definitely drawn and the distinction of "champion" carries less and less weight.

Time was, too, when a prize fighter, once well beaten, was thought to have little chance to "come back" and take his place at the top of the list.

Minor football teams hustle the "big three" college eleven to the grid-iron with shocking want of respect; while prize fighters get soundly whipped and then turn around and wrest back the championship crown. Battling Nelson and Stanley Ketchel are two fighters who have accomplished this feat, while the season's football record shows any number of instances of the little eleven forcing the big university teams to the limit.

Pioneer work by paid coaches has done much to broaden the football situation while improved methods in training and instructing fighters has likewise increased the number of first-class pugilists until it is sometimes difficult to rate them exactly.

But then it's so much more exciting to have championships continually in doubt—say nothing of being remarkably profitable for the promoters.

WILLIAM CONNETT, who refereed the Thanksgiving Day football game between the Carlisle Indians and the St. Louis University team, scatters some of the glamour that attached to the performance of the Indians here.

"The red men," remarked Connett, "seem to be much over-rated. They had nothing that any well-coached team should not possess. With a first-class back field St. Louis University would have beaten them, probably, unflinching though Cochem's team was in much of its work."

"The eleven that Cochems had in the field in 1907 would have defeated Carlisle 25 to 6, I think."

"If the Carlisle team is to keep its

DAVIS CUP TO REMAIN ABROAD

Australian Tennis Team Defeats Americans for Second Time in Melbourne Matches.

MELBOURNE, Nov. 30.—The Australian players today won the Davis cup, defeating Messrs. Wright and Alexander, the American contestants.

When the contest was resumed today there were two singles to be played and it was no easy because of previous defeats for the Americans to win both in order to bring the cup to this country. This they failed to do.

MOTORCYCLIST MAKES NEW RECORD AT LOS ANGELES

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Nov. 30.—Fred Huyck's motorcycle turned the Ascot Park oval yesterday in 53 seconds for one mile, which is one second faster than the world's record of 54 seconds, that he already held. With a standing start he made the first mile of ten in 1m. 1s., which was another world's record, and for five miles he had another to his credit in 4m. 38s. George Vile's motorcycle rode ten miles in 2m. 40s., which is another world's record.

fighter since Jim Corbett was in the ring. Probably not even San Francisco fight followers are so familiar with Abe's peculiar abilities as are St. Louisans. It was here that Jack McKenna brought Attell out of the mists of obscurity and planted him on a pedestal of fame. Attell showed himself a real ring phantom, and so much confidence did he have in his own skill and speed that he time and again offered to let Young Corbett and Terry McGovern make catch weights if they would get into the ring with him. He was matched with McGovern at one time, but Terry later called the bout off after discussing the affair with Sam Harris.

And Welch now has turned the trick that neither Young Corbett nor Terry McGovern cared particularly to undertake—and that, too, at a time when both were at the top of their careers.

Welch is undoubtedly a promising lightweight, and doubtless he will be given a chance to make his mark on that castiron fighter, Battling Nelson.

S.S.S. PURELY VEGETABLE

It is a generally recognized truth that medicines made from vegetable ingredients are a great deal better adapted to the delicate human system, and safer in every way, than those composed of strong mineral mixtures and compounds. Mercury, potash, arsenic, etc., which are used in the manufacture of most blood medicines, are too violent in their action, and frequently derange the system by disturbing the stomach and digestion, affecting the bowels, and when used for a prolonged period often cause Rheumatism. S. S. S. is the only blood medicine guaranteed absolutely and purely vegetable. It is made entirely of roots, herbs and barks, selected for their purifying and healing qualities. S. S. S. cures Rheumatism, Catarrh, Sores and Ulcers, Scrofula, Contagious Blood Poison, and all other blood diseases, because it cleanses the blood, and at the same time builds up the entire system by its fine vegetable tonic effects. S. S. S. may be taken by young or old with absolute safety, and with the assurance that it will cure all diseases and disorders due to an impure and poisoned blood supply, even reaching down and removing hereditary taints. MAY IRWIN IN "THE MOLLUSC" FAIRLY AMUSING

She Does Her Best to Vitalize
This Gentle Satire of Spinelessness.

OPPORTUNITY IS SCANT

"Mrs. Peckham's Carouse," George Ade's Playlet, Is Evening's Best Bill.

"THE MOLLUSC," in which May Irwin made her first St. Louis appearance as a Frohman star at the Olympic last night, illustrates a clever little satirical concept much better fitted for one-act farcical treatment than for elaboration into a three-act comedy.

The play concerns itself with a diagnosis of "molluscity" as a human weakness and with a suggestion for its elimination from one's system. Molluscity is laziness and selfishness developed to the point where its victim clings stubbornly to some vantage-rock of absolute indolence, and makes all those within its immediate sphere of influence pander to the mollusc by doing its work in life, and enabling it to live luxuriously by merely opening its mouth to receive the food that comes to it at high tide. The suggested cure for molluscity is suddenly to stop imperil its victim's peace of mind as to make the mollusc "get up and hustle" for itself, and then to prevent its return to molluscity.

May Irwin's humor as a Mollusc. May Irwin is the mollusc in Hubert Henry Davies' comedy. She does more than any other woman on the American stage could do in the role of an inveterate creature elaborated into a human being for the 12 minutes' entertainment of other human beings. Her Mrs. Baxter is perhaps the most laughable presentation of a person inculcated with the "hook-worm" of laziness that has ever been seen on the stage. The sole trouble is that molluscity is too passive a thing to furnish the action necessary for an entire evening's drama. The possibilities of spinelessness are so soon exhausted, you know.

Playwright Davies works hard to overcome this natural handicap. So, too, does Miss Irwin, within mollusc limitations. Similarly, also, does the little company of three players in her support, especially the excellent Miss Mary K. Taylor in the governor's role of Miss Roberts and the quite clever Mr. Forrest Robinson as Tom Kemp, brother of the mollusc, who discovers the cure for molluscity. Mr. Thomas F. Fallon as Mr. Baxter, the overly indulgent husband, whose yieldingness of spirit is responsible for the fastening of the mollusc habit upon his wife, is fairly satisfying, although he makes something of a drawing-room absurdity of himself by his abominable trick of "graying" his hair with what looks like big splashes of white paint daubed on here and there.

PLAYGOERS' GUIDE

OLYMPIC—May Irwin in "The Mollusc" and "Mrs. Peckham's Carouse." First-named play fairly entertaining, but somewhat thin and rushed. George Ade playlet is rich fare.

CENTURY—Edith Talfierro in "Polly of the Circus." A big production, pleasing, but lacking in dramatic effectiveness.

GARRICK—Williams and Walker in "New Bandanna Land." Play much improved since its last season's St. Louis success. Presented by clever colored company.

GRAND—"In Old Kentucky." Familiar and popular racing play, fairly well presented.

HAVLIN'S—"San Antonio," a musical play of early Texas life. Interesting and competently produced.

NEW COLUMBIA—New vaudeville bill, with Amelia Summerville and Cherish Simpson as top liners, opens today.

AMERICAN—New vaudeville bill, with Amelia Summerville and Cherish Simpson as top liners, opens today.

STANDARD—The Brigadiers. Burlesque and vaudeville.

GAYETY—Golden Crook Extravaganza Co. Burlesque and vaudeville.

as with a kalsomner's brush. There is no moment when you feel that "The Mollusc" fails to receive adequate treatment. But always you feel that it is drawn on too big a canvas.

Hat From "Mrs. Peckham's Carouse." May Irwin, entirely worthy of Charles Frohman's selection of her as one of his comedienne stars, is also worthy of a better play than this which comes to us with the prestige of a London success. She is the only woman I know who can play low comedy as it should be played.

She proves this in the uproariously funny "Mrs. Peckham's Carouse," the George Ade playlet used as last night's after-piece, in which we first saw her at the Century three seasons ago. Here she is at her best—and I should name George Ade as the one playwright above all others who can write a three-act comedy that shall give her the opportunity she deserves. Ade has the same vein of broad humor, the humor of comedy touched with farce, with which Miss Irwin is richly endowed. I believe he could conceive a character and give it a story-setting that would offer her the best chance of all her fun-making career.

In the meantime, if you like something what placid satire and quietly neat strokes in gentle misanthropy, "The Mollusc" is fairly worth your while. Last night's audience seemed to enjoy it rather keenly.

EDITH TALFIERRO IN "POLLY OF THE CIRCUS"

It's rather a bold, but not offensive, policy of church and circus ring that is being offered by Frederick Thompson at the Century Theater this week, with Edith Talfierro as a circus rider and Earle Ryder as a very reverend theologian. And, of course, there are other circus people and other church people. There are clowns, dogs and ponies, jugglers and acrobats; there are deacons and elders, Sunday-School teachers and scholars, but you're only interested in the circus rider and the minister. The story concerns them, the little romance is woven about them and they almost constantly have the center of the stage.

"Polly of the Circus" may not interest deeply those who view a play from a too critical standpoint or who expect to see strong character drawing and dramatic effectiveness, but to those who want to be entertained, who view a play merely as a play, it is excellent entertainment.

Audience Fairly Kats It Up. Polly, in telling the minister of circus trials and disappointments, says you never can tell what the people want—one year you give them a great show and it's a "frost," the next year you give them a "rotten show" and they flock to it. And as for proving that an audience is the "final court of appeal," last night's audience fairly "ate it up," and it is neither a great show nor a "rotten show." It's what they want. And given what he wants, man is satisfied.

Talfierro Scores Hit. Edith Talfierro, who has attracted attention before in St. Louis in less pretentious roles, has the stellar role in this Polly play and she displays a talent that gives promise of much better things in a play more suitable to her temperament. In the first act, wherein she meets the minister and talks of the world as seen from within a circus tent and learns from him of the great world without, of the beauty of religion and its refining influence on its people, and all teachings, and she talks of the ethics of the circus ring, the hardships and earnestness of its people and advises him to "never attempt anything that depends on something else for success," there is the true appeal of an artist.

Talfierro is unmistakably at her best in the first act. In the two following acts there is too much of the artificial for artistry to overcome.

Virtue and Gossip Clash. The play might have taken place in any small village. A circus comes to town and pitches its tents right under the parson's window. A young circus rider, in attempting her act, misses and is seriously injured; she is carried into the parsonage and left in the parson's charge. The circus moves on. All goes well and both the minister and the girl are happy until the busy tongue of gossip begins wagging. The girl learns that the minister's standing with his parishioners is endangered and she goes back to the circus life. The minister follows, explanations are made, the circus moves on and the minister and rider are left standing watching the caravan pass on to the next stand.

It is a big play and worth while. The circus ring, the scene behind the dressing room, the actual moving of the circus caravan are all imposing spectacles, and the early scenes in the parsonage and in the garden of the parsonage are as refreshing as a bright October day.

BRYAN'S SON-IN-LAW HAS NOT HEARD HE IS TO BE DIVORCED

Leavitt Declares He Means to Join
Wife in Denver and Live in U. S.

PARIS, Nov. 30.—W. H. Leavitt, son-in-law of William J. Bryan, refuses to believe the report telegraphed from Lincoln, Neb., that his father-in-law is about to send a lawyer to Paris to get a divorce for Mrs. Leavitt.

He says that his wife and he have always been on good terms and that she has never indicated in language or letters the slightest intention to seek a legal separation.

Mr. Leavitt, who is an artist of some note, is finishing a large painting, "The Last Supper," for figures in which prominent prelates and artists are depicted. When it is done he says he will join his wife in Denver, again taking up his residence in the United States.

The Societe des Beaux Arts is making a collection of paintings by its members to be sent to the United States early in the new year for exhibition in the principal cities. Mr. Leavitt has been asked to take charge of the exhibition and act as the society's representative in America. He has not yet decided whether he will do so or not.

MISSING MAN CARRIED $400; POLICE FIND NO TRACE

R. P. Morton of Houston, Tex.,
Disappears in St. Louis—Wore $250 Diamond.

The police have not found any trace of R. P. Morton of Houston, Tex., formerly of Pittsburgh, who disappeared mysteriously from the Maryland Hotel last Friday. Morton was traveling with W. G. Burchfield, also of Houston. When Morton left the hotel he had $400 and wore a $250 diamond ring. Recently he met with financial reverses in a Western mining enterprise, but he did not seem to be despondent.

Morton is a Princeton graduate, has traveled all over the world, and is a bachelor. He is 40 years old, weighs about 175 pounds, is stockily built, wears nose glasses and good clothes. He is a fluent talker and makes himself agreeable.

He came to St. Louis with Burchfield in connection with a Houston woman proposition. He was employed by Burchfield and expected to use his influence in Pittsburgh and New York to attract capital to Texas. He is said to be a cousin of a Pittsburgh banker.

PLAYGROUNDS REDUCE ARRESTS

Fifty Per Cent Fewer Children
Apprehended in One District.

Since the establishment of the public playgrounds in Carr Park, the annual number of arrests of children in the Carr Street Police District has fallen off 50 per cent, according to an official report read by Prof. William Trelease, director of Shaw's Garden, in a lecture at Self-Culture Hall, 1532 Carr street, Sunday night.

He analyzed the plans of the Civic League for beautifying St. Louis and his remarks were illustrated by stereoscopic views.

BECOMING A MOTHER

Is an ordeal which all women approach with indescribable fear, for nothing compares with the pain and horror of childbirth. The thought of the suffering and danger in store for her, robs the expectant mother of all pleasant anticipations of the coming event, and casts over her a shadow of gloom which cannot be shaken off. Thousands of women have found that the use of Mother's Friend during pregnancy robs confinement of all pain and danger, and insures safety to life of mother and child. This scientific liniment is a God-send to all women at the time of their most critical trial. Not only does Mother's Friend carry women safely through the perils of child-birth, but its use gently prepares the system for the coming event, prevents "morning sickness" and other discomforts of this period.
